BIG FIVE AGREES U. S. CAN KEEP PACIFIC ISLANDS

Iwo and Okinawa Are Included

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., May 30—The United States gets the Pacific islands American arms have wrested from Japan.

This was assured today at the international security conference when the Big Five powers—the United States, Great Britain, Russia, France, and China—agreed on the provisions affecting these islands contained in the draft of the world peace league's trusteeship system.

The agreement was completed when Russia, while dissenting from other provisions, accepted the parts of the plan applying to the Pacific islands.

Russia Upsets Plans

Russia then proceeded to throw a monkey wrench into the conference machinery at an open session of the commission that approved the structure and functions of the proposed world peace league's general assembly.

One provision was that the secretary general, chief administrative officer of the league, shall be elected by the general assembly on recommendation of the security council with none of the Big Five entitled to a veto and with the assembly empowered to reject a nomination.

N. K. Novikov, delegate from Russia, objected and forced reference of the provision to the steering committee.

Doubt Quick Conclusion

With controversies on the veto power and other phases of the Dumbarton Oaks plan raging in other committees some conference leaders doubted the convention can be concluded by June 15 while others suggested it may be necessary to adjourn and complete the charter at another meeting several months hence.

Under the trusteeship arrangements agreed to by the Big Five the United States will be able to retain sovereign possession of the Jap islands unless and until congress shall decide to commit them or any parts of them to a league trusteeship.

U. S. Could Be Trustee

If they should be placed under a trusteeship, the United States, under the plan, could exercise its prerogative to be designated the trustee. If then, however, the United States should reserve certain islands or parts of islands as strategic areas for the location of American military bases such areas would be subject to regulation by the league's security council.

In such regulation any one of the Big Five would have the power to veto arrangements the United States might deem vital to the establishment, maintenance, and administration of naval and air bases for American defense. The only way to avoid such interference would be for the United States to hold the islands in sovereign possession in-

HuntDadWho Killed Girl in Rage at Suitor

Kansas City, Mo., May 30 [Special]—Police search for Roy E. Davis, 42, furnace repairman, who last night killed his daughter after shooting at her soldier sweetheart, was intensified tonight on receipt by a neighbor of a phone call from Davis asking, "How's Lula Mae?"

The neighbor said the call came from Independence, a nearby village, and that Davis sobbed, "I can't believe it," when told Lula Mae was dead.

Guarded Daughters Jealously

Lula Mae, 21, was the eldest of three daughters over whom Davis had for years kept a jealous vigil to prevent their receiving attentions from boy friends. The others, Mildred, 19, and Wanda, 15, witnessed the slaying of Lula Mae, which took place a few minutes after Davis chased her suitor, Pvt. David Harold Sharp, 21, from the house.

Mildred and Wanda told police that Sharp, home on furlough after two years in the China-Burma-India theater, called on Lula Mae and was ushered into the living room by their father, who produced a revolver and asked Sharp if he had forgotten a three year old warning to stay away from Lula Mae.

When Sharp shook his head, Davis shouted, "This is it," and fired at him, the girls said. The bullet missed, Sharp ran from the house, and Lula Mae grappled with her father, imploring him not to shoot again. Davis turned the gun on his daughter and fired, remarking, "I told you I was going to do this." Lula Mae died within a few minutes.

"Not Sorry," Note Says

Davis then wrote a note stating that "when you have a daughter who has been hanging around a skunk the only way to keep her from getting hurt is to kill her too." He concluded the note with, "I am not sorry."

Police said Davis left the house with the revolver and for two hours rode in an automobile with a neighbor to whom he appealed for a ride because he was "in trouble." The frightened neighbor dropped Davis off in suburban Leeds.

Davis was next heard from at 2:30 a. m. when he phoned Sharp's home and asked Mrs. Norah Sharp, the soldier's mother, how Lula Mae was. When Mrs. Sharp said the girl was dead, he broke the connection.

Seek Safety in Jail

The surviving Davis girls and their mother, Mrs. Wilda Davis, spent last night at police headquarters, as did Sharp, for their own protection.

Sharp told police he and Lula Mae had been classmates in grade and high school, but had never been able to meet openly because of the father's objections. Yesterday he received a phone call from Davis stating he could now call on Lula Mae. Police said this call was apparently intended to lure Sharp to his death.

Britain's Crown Jewels Brought Back to London

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, May 30—The British crown jewels, which were stored in the underground passages of Windsor castle at the outbreak of the war, were returned to London tonight. They were taken to the Bank of England instead of the jewel house in the tower of London which was damaged by a flying bomb and has not been repaired.

Mrs. Truman Has Smashing Day

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—Mrs. Harry S. Truman tried valiantly to christen two hospital planes today, but the army and navy hadn't arranged for the champagne bottles to break properly.

Sponsoring the planes purchased by the Congressional club's war bond sales, Mrs. Truman banged the bottle first on the army C-54.

Nine times she bounced the bottle as army officers scurried aimlessly. A military aid banged the bottle four times.

The ship has a dented nose to show for it.

Navy officers, forewarned, found a hammer and gave the bottle the business from below when Mrs. Truman turned to christen their plane. The President's wife got spattered with champagne.

Once again she was led back to the army plane, but this time merely to pose for photographers. Mrs. Truman refused to be rattled.

She even broke her no-speech rule, saying:

"In sending forth these planes, we send with them our love and sincere desire that the wounded whom they carry will be brought safely home."

After the unfinished ceremony, it was learned that no one had thought to tell Mrs. Truman to hit the bottle against the sharp edge of the wheel well, nor had the thick bottles been properly "scored" to assure breakage instantly.

OUR UNSINKABLE AIRCRAFT CARRIERS

60,000 Youths Swing Out at Religious Fest

BY RITA FITZPATRICK

Religion in bobby socks attracted 60,000 persons to Soldiers' field last night.

It was a Memorial day rally conducted by the Chicagoland Youth for Christ Movement with a modernistic setting and a chorus of 2,000 youngsters who frequently "stepped up" some of the old tried and true hymns. The Rev. Torrey Johnson, 35 year old evangelist with a bow tie and tonal qualities suggestive of Frank Sinatra, was the Voice. The Rev. Mr. Johnson founded the youth movement.

Rally Has "Whooping" Start

The rally got off to a "whooping" start earlier in the day when the baseball team from the Glenview naval air station soundly trounced the nine from Wheaton college. Several thousands viewed the game but by 5:30 p. m., an hour before the main program, throngs had gathered ready for the "big show."

As floodlights pierced the field, a high, white superstructure dramatic in the Billy Rose tradition, dominated the north end of the amphitheater. It was the "pulpit" of the Rev. Mr. Johnson.

Mix Religion, Patriotism

With a smooth blend of religion and patriotism, the rally opened with a flag raising ceremony. While a marine color guard posted the Christian and American flags at the north end of the field, 17 members of the Girls Pioneers and the Boys Brigade posted 17 American flags and three Christian flags at various points around the stands.

Then a living cross of nearly 500 white uniformed nurses marched down the field as two immense stars behind the "pulpit" were unveiled. The chorus and the band of 300 cow licked youngsters "swung" into "I Shall Not Be Moved" under the direction of T. J. Bitticoffer, Detroit radio singer, and Lt. Col. Harry Atway of the Salvation Army.

Pageant Highlights Service

Highlight of the evening, however, was a colorful, missionary pageant with representatives of China, India, Africa, Russia, and the United States in native costumes. Each group with its own color guard, formed the points of a vast star in the center of the field. Then the field darkened, and a revolving lighthouse flashed on the tense faces of the young audience. The slightly syncopated tones of "Gospel Lighthouse" rang out while white robed figures blowing trumpets were discerned atop the colonnades of the superstructure.

The show was over. As one bobby socker with flying hair put it, as she jammed thru the crowds, "Boy, wasn't that something!"

CHIANG RESIGNS AS PREMIER OF CHINA; STILL HEAD OF STATE

CHUNGKING, May 31 [Thursday]—(AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek resigned today as president of executive yuan [premier] and was succeeded by Acting Premier T. V. Soong.

Chiang's relinquishment of the position of premier did not affect his position as president of China and the head of the state. It was presumed that in view of the accelerated tempo of the far east war, he intends to devote himself primarily to his main job—supreme commander of the allied forces in the China theater. He announced his resignation as premier at a meeting today of the newly elected central executive committee of the Kuomintang, China's sole recognized political party.

Elevation of Soong to the full premiership raised the possibility he might attend any impending meeting of the Big Five leaders [China, France, Russia, United States, and Great Britain]. It also would give him greater face if he makes an expected visit to Moscow on his way back to China from the San Francisco conference.

Wong Weh Hao, minister of economic affairs and head of China's war production board, was appointed vice premier, succeeding H. H. Kung. The appointment probably was a reward for his labors as head of the Chinese war production board.

U.S. Will Ship Thousands of Cows Abroad

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—About 50,000 dairy and draft animals will be shipped to five Balkan countries during the next 18 months to help replace Europe's decimated live stock herds, the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration announced today.

Funds to provide the animals will come from UNRRA, an official said. [The United States, under the act authorizing UNRRA participation, pays two-thirds of UNRRA's costs.]

About half the animals are scheduled to come from the United States and the remainder from other nations in the western hemisphere.

First Shipment to Greece

The first shipment, 300 dairy heifers and 900 draft animals, will leave the United States for Greece within a few weeks. In addition, 300 bred heifers and 300 mares probably will be shipped shortly to Yugoslavia.

UNRRA said its live stock program was designed to replace one per cent of the 5,000,000 animals destroyed during the war in Greece, Albania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, and Poland. The first shipment was directed to Greece, it said, because of her "extreme need."

During the day Belgium's minister to the United States, Paul Kronacher, said that Belgian cattle stocks are down to 30 per cent of pre-war numbers and 50 per cent of pre-war weight.

Reject Argentine Meat

After calling on Acting Secretary of State Grew, Kronacher said his country is in desperate need.

Kronacher said Belgium could buy all the meat she needs from Argentina tomorrow but instead had put the matter up to the American-British-Canadian combined food board because she wanted to follow what he said was allied policy in this respect.

BATTLE RAGES IN STREETS OF CAPITAL CITY

Conflict in Fiume

TRIESTE, May 30 [Reuters]—Serious fighting has broken out in Fiume between Italian Partisans and Marshal Tito's forces, unconfirmed reports here say. The reports are difficult to confirm as the allied forces cannot advance farther east in the Trieste area than the positions fixed by agreement with Tito.

BY FRANK O'BRIEN

DAMASCUS, Syria, May 30 (AP)—This Syrian city has been a battleground for French and Syrian forces since 6:55 p. m. yesterday in one of the most inexplicable outbreaks of violence on record.

Artillery, mortar, and machine gun fire, as well as bombs, have been raining on Damascus almost unceasingly from the French forces. Syrian gendarmes and police have given answering fire with every available weapon.

Clay Gowran of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and I were trapped in the Serail [government house] when Damascus exploded suddenly yesterday evening into utter chaos.

Pinned Down Three Hours

We were held in the Serail for three hours by the constant shooting, but finally were able to dash thru a lull in the firing to reach the British officers club, halfway to our hotel. Then after another wait of two hours we were able to get to the hotel.

Eventually we decided to take refuge in the British consulate, going there this afternoon to escape the continual mortar fire. Even there safety was not assured, for one British officer was killed there this morning by a mortar.

Altho written in Damascus, this dispatch had to be sent 75 miles by messenger to Beyrouth, the Lebanese capital, to be transmitted because it was impossible to pass 300 yards thru the rain of fire isolating the Damascus telegraph office.

REPORT 200 CASUALTIES

DAMASCUS, Syria, May 30 [Reuters].—Fighting continued here today after going on thruout the night. With one peaceful interval before dawn, there was the whine of shells passing overhead and the constant stutter of machine guns.

A truce was arranged between 4 and 6 p. m.

The number of casualties is not yet known. One report said that 200 wounded civilians were in hospitals. Six civilians were reported to have been killed when French troops directed mortar fire against the citadel. One shell blew a gap in the wall thru which a number of Syrian political prisoners escaped.

A fairly large fire was caused by incendiary bullets hitting a small gasoline dump near the government printing works opposite the British officers' club. The parliament buildings were severely damaged by fire and shells.

Just what happened is difficult to piece together, but the trouble started soon after the French had made

IT'S ANZIO AGAIN! CROSSES ROW ON ROW LINE FIELD

LIVING AND DEAD HONORED

Chicago pays tribute to its heroes, living and dead, in Memorial day services and in welcome to Gen. Clark and 50 overseas fighters. Story on page 6. Families reunited with 5th army veterans. Story on page 6. Americans at home and on front lines pay homage. Story on page 7.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ANZIO, Italy, May 30—Twelve months had rolled away and it was the beachhead again.

Here were the long lines of white crosses and stars of David in the American military cemetery nestling by the calm waters of the Tyrrhenian sea. Here again were some of those who had fought and lived—men of the 3d and 45th infantry divisions—standing in perfect alignment as the Stars and Stripes was raised.

Here again were two of the generals who had led their men over that now hallowed ground 19 miles below Rome. Lt. Gen. Truscott, who commanded the 6th corps at Anzio from February thru May, 1944, and now commands the 5th army, and Maj. John W. O'Daniel, commander then as now of the 3d division, were back with many others for Memorial day services.

Anzio's Second Memorial Day

It was the second Memorial day observed at Anzio. During the first one last year, altho we had broken out of the beachhead confines, the Germans were not far away and some of their shells fell near the graves. Today there were no sounds of war, and by each grave—6,614 American ones and 2,723 German ones—were flowers. And there were American flags to mark each doughboy's resting place.

The speech of the day was delivered by Gen. Truscott, whose theme was that these American dead of Anzio had contributed immeasurably to the allies' total victory in Europe.

"And we must take stock of the task remaining to be done," he said, "and draw from your sacrificing spirit the inspiration for final victory in the Pacific.

Truscott Places Wreath

Truscott, on behalf of the 6th corps, laid a wreath near the flag pole. Gen. O'Daniel, who took the 3d from Italy thru southern France, Alsace, and Bavaria to the spectacular finale at Berchtesgaden, placed a wreath for his division.

A British officer also placed flowers, and Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.] who, with a committee, is studying communications in the Mediterranean theater, laid the fourth wreath on behalf of the Rome chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The Gettysburg Address was read by Brig. Gen. Thoburn K. Brown, commander of the Rome area, who likened the occasion on which Abraham Lincoln spoke to he one today. Invocations were given by Protestant, Jewish, and Catholic chaplains. Military bands played, and there was a firing of volleys and a moment of silence before the flag was raised.

Anzio looks much as when we left it for the climaxing push on Rome last year. The beachside villas are still gutted and crumbling, and there has been no effort to repair much of the shell damage.

Thick-Skinned Pals Shed Crocodile Tears for Joe

Jacksonville, Fla., May 30 (AP)—Big Joe, Jacksonville's veteran alligator whose age was figured at more than 300 years, is dead. A fight last week with two alligator pals was too much for the old boy. He succumbed last night.

Japs Battle Japs; Yanks Wonder

BY WALTER SIMMONS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

DAVAO, Mindanao, May 30—Maj. Nicholas Sloan of Hoopeston, Ill., a 24th division battalion commander, felt pretty sorry for his friend Maj. Roy Marcy of Walla Walla, Wash., another battalion commander, when he heard a night battle going on near Marcy's perimeter a thousand yards away.

"I'd better call him up and see if I can help," Sloan told his officers.

"Hey, I was just trying to call you," said Marcy when the connection was established. "Sounds like you fellows are up to your necks over there. Can we help?"

"You mean you aren't being attacked?" said the amazed Sloan.

All that night the officers wondered what had happened. Next morning they found out. Two Jap forces, roaming in the darkness, had collided, fought a pitched battle, and finally retreated in disorder. They had been unable to identify each other by the sound of their fire because of the habitual Jap use of captured allied weapons.

YANK DIVISION DRIVE TO RING FLEEING JAPS

Nearly All of Naha Won by Marines

ARRIVE FROM EUROPE

GUAM, May 31 [Thursday]—(AP)—The 1st marine division raised the American flag over Okinawa's Shuri castle at 1:45 p. m. yesterday. Old Glory went up as marines on the west flank and doughboys on the east moved to encircle Japanese survivors in the moated medieval fortress.

An official spokesman said the flag raising signalized capture of the castle, until recently the headquarters of the Japanese commander on Okinawa. Front dispatches said the marines were mopping scattered enemy pockets inside the castle and fighting on high ground immediately to the east.

Marines Strengthen Positions

Adm. Nimitz reported that marines of Maj. Gen. Pedro A. Del Valle's 1st division strengthened and built up their positions in the castle ruins, first reached Tuesday in a swift dash by Company A of the 5th regiment, led by Capt. Julius Dusenberry of Charlotte, N. C.

"It's a miracle how they ever got up there," said Del Valle.

The leathernecks had left all their armor and supply vehicles behind in Asato when they struck out across the mud covered draws which had stood between them and the castle for the last two weeks. When A company reached the castle there were only a few dead Japanese and fewer than 50 to defend the bastion. All were killed.

On the west flank, Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd Jr.'s 6th marine division veterans pushed southeastward from occupied Naha toward the Kokuba river, which empties into Naha harbor. Nearly all of Naha, blasted capital of Okinawa, is in Yank hands.

Drive to Circle Shuri

On the east flank Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnold's 7th infantry division, driving westward, captured high ground near the town of Yonawa, near American held Yonabaru harbor.

The objective on both flanks is to close a circle about a mile south of Shuri castle to compress the enemy garrison. Many troops and civilians have been observed leaving Shuri for points south.

The most westerly patrols of the 7th were near Chan, about a mile due south of Shuri. Forward elements of the 7th and the 96th were only about two miles from an encircling linkup.

7th Widens Grip on Coast

Capture of Yonawa high ground served to broaden the holding of the 7th along the east coast. Advance units were more than two miles west of the town.

Northeast of Shuri castle, rock-walled fortress which housed the 16th century kings of the Ryukyus, the Japanese continued fanatical resistance against the 77th and 96th infantry divisions.

Strong combat patrols of the 1st division were reported probing thru the western sector of Shuri town, which, like Naha, was reduced to rubble in the long American pounding from land, sea and air.

Mud and rain still hampered ground operations and posed a severe supply problem for forward elements.

Down Eight Jap Planes

Adm. Nimitz said the poor flying weather reduced Japanese aircraft activity. Several isolated raids were made Tuesday, resulting in damage to two light units of the American fleet. Eight Japanese planes were shot down during the day.

The southern end of Okinawa was in sight of the ground forces as they exploited the collapse of the Japanese line. The 7th division's thrust from Ozato Mura heights, combined with the dash into Shuri castle, heightened the pace of battle.

Lt. Col. Jackson Gillis, of Hollywood, Cal., member of the 7th division's staff, said that half of the remainder of the southern area in Japanese hands should be occupied by the 10th army within a week.

3 BUILDINGS LEFT IN NAHA

BY THOMAS MORROW
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NAHA, Okinawa, May 30—Only three buildings in this capital of Okinawa are recognizable today. They are the city's bank, a municipal building, and the opera house.

The rest of Naha is in ruins, evidence of the terrific pounding by American artillery and warships.

Snipers Still in City

As we drove down the main paved street, intact save for rents and tears, alongside the twisted tracks of the narrow gauge railroad, a marine fixing a flat tire waved down our jeep and said there was a sniper around. Apparently there were more, for as he spoke several bullets whined overhead. Then an exploding Japanese phosphorous shell made the roadside ditch a homey place.

Pvt. Pine Paradise, 1611 Clarence av., Cicero, Ill., lit a cigaret and said he was about to go out with some other marines and "take some hill" in the bank, which retained a quiet respectability despite a few shell holes.

Six vaults and several safes still held the money of the hurriedly departing Okinawans and Japanese. One vault was open, the floor ankle deep in paper money and coins.

Barber Shop Wrecked

A lone barber chair stood in the midst of a wrecked barber shop. In the opera house, accommodating 500, were rows of seats sharply rising to the roof. A window offered a view of 14 wrecked ships.

The 10 mile trip back from Naha required four hours to driving thru heavy mud. One truck tried to pull a jeep from its resting place in 18 inch mud ruts but gave up. A heavier truck tried and succeeded in pulling off the bumper. It got behind and pushed the vehicle after denting the back end only three inches. A puncture added time to the journey and tried the patience of the jeep driver, Tom Lynch, 6428 S. Seeley av., Chicago.

60,000 YOKOHAMA HOMES BURNED IN B-29 RAIDS—JAPS

San Francisco, Cal., May 30 (AP)—Tokyo radio today said the American incendiary raid on Yokohama yesterday left 250,000 inhabitants of Japan's second largest port homeless with 60,000 houses destroyed, but the count of dead and injured would take some time to complete.

The city's communications and transportation lines were knocked out, providing more war worries for Premier Kantaro Suzuki, who conferred today with six former premiers of the empire.

While the broadcast gave no details of the subjects discussed, Domei news agency reported that the nation was filled "with trepidation" over raid damage to the imperial palace.

The former premiers attending the conference were listed as Kuniaki Koiso, Hideki Tojo, Baron Kijichiro Hiranuma, Prince Funimaro Konoye, Keisuke Okada, and Koki Hirota.

FLYER IS BACK AFTER 2½ YEARS IN NAZI HANDS

Second Lt. James Alexander Jr., 26, who believes his was the first American heavy bomber crew shot down in the European theater of operations, arrived in Chicago last night after 32 months in a German prison camp and headed for "60 short days" with his parents in Lawrenceville, Lawrence county.

Lt. Alexander was bombardier on a B-24 which was brought down by flak and fighter pilots over Crete Aug. 21, 1942. Eight of the crew members were killed, and Alexander and the pilot, Lt. Frank Newton of Cameron, Tex., were injured. After two months in hospitals in Rome and in Frankfort-on-Main, they were taken to stalag No. 3 where they spent most of their captive days. Lt. Alexander watched the camp grow from two American officers to 6,000 American officers before Gen. Patton's 3d army liberated them last April 29.

The bombardier recalled that he was quite a prize for the Germans, who sought to question him about American air strength even as he lay in the hospital with two bullet wounds in his head.

NAVY SPEEDS SHIFT OF AMPHIBIOUS UNITS TO PACIFIC THEATER

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—The redeployment of United States navy amphibious forces from Europe to the Pacific is progressing swiftly. Eleven of the 15 main American bases in the United Kingdom have been closed or are being decommissioned, it was announced today at headquarters of Commodore Virgil E. Korns, commander of United States navy ports and bases here.

Only about 20,000 of the 120,000 American sailors who participated in amphibious operations from Normandy until the German surrender remain here. During the last month, several thousand returned to the United States for furloughs and reassignment. Others are leaving as fast as transportation becomes available.

SHIP REPAIRING SLOWED UP AS WORKERS QUIT

BY JOSEPH HEARST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., May 30—The repair of American navy ships, damaged in operations against the Japanese, is presenting a serious man power problem, Secretary Forrestal and other navy officials disclosed today at a press conference at which they emphasized the need for workers to stay on the job in west coast repair yards.

Forrestal said that from March 15 thru May 23 navy shipboard casualties in support of Okinawa ground forces were 4,270 dead and missing, and Adm. Frederick J. Horne, vice chief of naval operations, said this figure should give every one an idea of the extent to which ships are being damaged.

Forrestal said in one attack by Jap suicide planes the destroyers Hadley and Evans were under continuous attack for 90 minutes by 150 planes during which time the Hadley shot down 23 planes and the Evans 19. Both destroyers were hit and damaged.

20,000 Below Ceiling

Three west coast navy yards are 20,000 workers below their ceiling and the situation is comparable in private yards, the navy officials said. The need is most acute for electricians, sheet metal workers, and machinists.

To ease the labor shortage in the Pacific coast yards the navy said selective service has ordered blanket deferments for skilled shipyard workers in that area and the WMC has given the yards a No. 1 priority on workers. The navy also will provide transportation for east coast workers who will go to the Pacific coast and guarantee them adequate housing.

Loses 600 in Month

The navy said that despite recruiting drives the Mare Island, Cal., navy yard is 9,000 workers below its ceiling. Its net loss in workers in the last month was 600. The Puget Sound, Wash., navy yard also lost a net of 600 workers in the last month and is 5,000 under its ceiling.

The net loss at the Hunters Point, Cal., drydock in the last month was 700 workers and the yard needs 6,000 more workers to operate at full strength. It now has 16,000 employes.

Rear Adm. Frederick G. Crisp, director of shore establishments and personnel, said the aircraft carrier Franklin was brought all the way from Japanese home waters to the Brooklyn navy yard because of the situation in the west coast yards. It will take nine months to repair the Franklin, he said. From four to six months are needed to repair seriously damaged cruisers and repairs to seriously damaged destroyers take up to three months.

John Doyle.

PRESS JAPANESE INTO MINDANAO MOUNTAIN WILDS

MANILA, May 31 [Thursday]—(AP)—Japanese forces on Mindanao, pushed out of their Sayre highway positions in the center of the island and from Davao on the southwest, today were being gradually compressed in largely unexplored mountain country.

The 31st division was driving them eastward along the Kibawe-Talomo trail. The 24th division forced them westward.

In northern Luzon, the 25th division killed 150 Japanese Monday and Tuesday in mopping up around Santa Fe, on the rugged southern mountain approach to the Cagayan valley. The 38th division, consolidating its position around the captured Wawa dam east of Manila, killed more than 200 of the enemy.

On northern Borneo's Tarakan Island the Australians compressed the Japanese into an area east of the Djoeata oil field, where naval units shelled them.

Truman Cruises Potomac, Working on Parley Talk

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—President Truman spent the day cruising on the Potomac river and framing the speech with which he will close the San Francisco conference. George Allen of Mississippi, a former District of Columbia commissioner who traveled with Mr. Truman during his Vice Presidential campaign, went along on the yacht trip to assist with the speech. So did Stephen T. Early, a special assistant who is retiring this week to enter private business.

SWEDISH SAILORS THREATEN STRIKE

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 30 [Reuters]—A strike by the Swedish Sailors union is threatened for June 6, following the union's rejection today of a new labor agreement.

MIDWEST YANKS' 'BANZAI' CHARGE WINS A JAP HILL

BY WALTER SIMMONS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

DAVAO, Mindanao, May 30—Yanks of the 24th division got so fed up with nightly Jap banzai charges that they put on one themselves and took a hill that had withstood two assaults.

Second Lt. Lee Weeks, Perkinston, Miss., led his platoon on a wide flanking move on the third attempt. Infantry men, including Staff Sergeants Raymond Archambeau of Michigan and Alvin Schumaker, Holland, Ind.; Pvt. Lloyd Harper, East Peoria, Ill.; Pvt. Robert Hall, Union City, Ind., and Pvt. Loren Hans, Ladoga, Ind., cut their way thru the jungle and stole up the muddy back slope of the 60 degree hill at dusk. When darkness fell, Lt. Weeks leading his first combat assignment, cried, "Charge," and the platoon dashed from the top of the hill onto the unsuspecting defenders, wiping them out.

Chicagolanders Hammer Japs

Chicagoland fighters are making their blows felt in the struggle around Davao. When an infantry battalion was pinned down by heavy fire from a Japanese hill position, a 63d field artillery battery of which Pvt. Arthur Kolan, 710 W. 14th st., Chicago, is a member, took over. After it had fired dozens of rounds all activity ceased in the enemy position.

Pvt. Eugene Jastper, 856 N. Fairfield av., Chicago, and his buddies spent a night surrounded by Japs. Their hand grenades exhausted, the Yanks nevertheless fought on in the rain, keeping the Japs from assembling for a coördinated attack. They didn't get any sleep but they found eight enemy dead next morning.

Heroes Made in Night

Heroism is commonplace in the night battles in the Davao area. Pvt. Joseph Prasek, 5209 S. Homan av., Chicago, a mortar man, fired all night in a torrential rain until his mortar drove itself into the mud and left only six inches of the tube above ground. When his ammunition was exhausted, he volunteered to care for the wounded.

A Jap night attack so angered Tech. Sgt. Marvin Sorenson, Viborg, S. D., and Pvt. Albert Minarik, 7641 St. Lawrence av., Chicago, that when dawn came they shouted, "Let's go after the rats," and leaped from their foxholes. Four other men joined them. With tommy guns, rifles, and carbines they sprayed a grove into which the Japanese had fled. In the undergrowth the Yanks found 14 enemy dead.

CONTROL BOARD MEETS IN REICH IN A FEW DAYS

Execute 600 Viennese

MOSCOW, May 30 (AP)—Tass correspondent Eugene Ratner reported from Vienna, Austria, today that more than 600 Viennese had been executed by the Gestapo in the Vienna suburb of Floridsdorf.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

PARIS, May 30—The allied control commission for Germany will meet in the next few days in Germany, it was learned here tonight. Marshall Gregory Zhukov will represent soviet Russia on the commission, with Gen. Eisenhower, Field Marshal Montgomery, and Gen. Joseph-Pierre Koenig representing the United States, Britain, and France.

The Moscow radio has also announced the imminent meeting of the commission. The site of the first meeting of the council has not been announced here, and Moscow radio's statement gives no more definite location than to say that the meeting is to be held within Germany. It is believed here, however, that it will be held, if not in Berlin, somewhere in the Berlin area, possibly at Potsdam.

Set Up Air Council

PARIS, May 30 (AP)—Supreme headquarters announced today it had set up an allied control council at Berchtesgaden to direct and liquidate the operations of the German air command.

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Harper, air division director for the United States group in the council, will command the control party, assisted by Air Vice Marshal C. R. Steele of the R. A. F.

Monty Issues Proclamation

BRITISH 2D ARMY HDQ., May 30 [Reuters]—Field Marshal Montgomery tonight issued his first proclamation to the German people since his appointment as British representative on the allied control commission. It said:

"The area occupied by the British army in Germany will be governed for the present by the military government under my order."

DOMESTIC SPAT BRINGS CAPTURE OF 'HAW HAW'

LUENEBERG, Germany, May 30 (AP)—British surgeons, in a simple operation, removed a bullet from William [Lord Haw Haw] Joyce's hip today and a report from the British 2d army hospital said the renegade British broadcaster would be "quite fit" in several days. Joyce, who broadcast Nazi propaganda during the war, was under heavy guard in the hospital.

Mrs. William Joyce

"Haw Haw," captured recently by two British officers who recognized his voice, had been shot when he made what appeared to be a threatening move. As soon as his condition permits he will be transferred to London by plane.

A British intelligence officer said the propagandist's capture resulted indirectly from a quarrel between him and a 34 year old English woman who said she was his wife. Joyce left the house where they were staying near Flensburg apparently in a huff after their quarrel and came upon the British officers as he strolled thru the woods. The woman was later arrested and spent last night under guard in the same house in which Gestapo Chief Himmler poisoned himself.

JACKSON VISIT SPEEDS TRIAL OF CRIMINALS: EDEN

Commons Told Great Progress Is Made

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Eden said today that "very great progress" had been made in arranging for trials of German war prisoners as a result of conversations with Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson, special United States prosecutor.

Jackson, after completing a preliminary two day survey of the work of the war crimes commission here and talking with allied officials on the continent, left for consultations in Washington. He said he hoped to return "in about two weeks with a sufficient staff to carry our share of the work involved."

The American representative emphasized that his talks with British officials had shown there was no "substantial difference of opinion" on trial procedure.

Eden, sparring with Commons members who demanded to know whether the allies had agreed upon essential arrangements for the trials of Hermann Goering and others, would say only that there had been "most useful consultations with Judge Jackson in the last few days that have resulted in very great progress being made."

Three Classifications

Altho there was no special confirmation, it was understood that war criminals had been classified in these three categories:

1. Those whose crimes cover more than one country—such as Goering and Rudolf Hess.

2. Those who have been accused by only one country.

3. Those regarded as renegades or traitors—such as William [Lord Haw Haw] Joyce and Vidkun Quisling, who will be tried under the laws of their native lands.

It was established definitely that Russia would not have a representative at the three day conference of the allied war crimes commission meeting here tomorrow. The soviet has a similar commission of its own.

Russia's absence was viewed as a threat to complete success of the conference. Altho the announced purpose of the meeting was to perfect the machinery for detecting war criminals, the chief difficulty in speeding the trials thus far has been the lack of a working accord between the great powers on plans for bringing nazi leaders to justice.

4-Power Parley Needed

Signs mounted that a meeting of the four major powers—Britain, France, Russia and the United States—would be necessary to avoid confusion and conflicts. Justice Jackson, just before leaving for Washington, said he hoped Russia and France soon would name their representatives to the prosecution panel.

The London Evening Star declared editorially that "an early announcement on the allies' plan would dispel public disquiet which has already found expression in commons."

Asked what would be done with Haw Haw and with John Amery, son of L. C. Amery, secretary for India, Eden told commons it was a matter for the whole government to decide. Amery also broadcast for the Nazis and now is in allied hands.

Report 50 Gestapo Men Slain

LONDON, May 30 [Reuters]—The allies have executed 50 Gestapo men at Flensburg, headquarters of the late Doenitz "government" of Germany, it was reported from Copenhagen today.

They had been brought from the Froestloevs camp in Denmark to Flensburg, where the allied military court condemned them to death, allied headquarters in Flensburg said.

EISENHOWER EASES CENSORSHIP CURBS IN HIS WAR THEATER

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, May 30 (AP)—Supreme headquarters announced today that censorship in the European theater of operations had been discontinued "except for major troop movements and details connected therewith and such other matters of high military importance as may require reference to the supreme commander" [Gen. Eisenhower].

The terse directive was handed down from advanced supreme headquarters and surprised the censors themselves as much as the correspondents, for both had been told that the SHAEF censorship branch expected to maintain a measure of control over all news sent from the theater for some time.

Altho the announcement was issued, SHAEF said, "to clarify the position of this headquarters," it failed to explain what matters would be considered of such importance as to require reference to Eisenhower.

EDEN SAYS IKE O.K.'D BORNHOLM SEIZURE BY REDS

For How Long?

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 30—The underground Danish press has been revived on Bornholm, the Stockholm Tidningen reported today from Copenhagen. The first illegal newspaper to appear there after liberation, named Attention, wants to know how long the Russians will stay on Bornholm.

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—Russian troops are occupying the little Danish island of Bornholm in the Baltic sea only temporarily, Foreign Secretary Eden assured the house of commons today. He said relations between the soviets and local Danish authorities were cordial.

When the Russians landed on Bornholm on May 9 their commander issued a statement "to the effect that the island had been occupied by soviet forces provisionally until questions of Germany relating to the war were solved," Eden said.

The foreign secretary disclosed that Gen. Eisenhower both knew of and approved the Russian occupation beforehand. Eisenhower had intended to send an allied force to Bornholm to accept surrender of German forces there, but before doing so he asked the Russians on May 8 if it would interfere with their plans.

Eden said the Russians replied that "in view of the fact that the Germans [on Bornholm] were within the sphere of operation of soviet armed forces and the commander of the German garrison had requested assistance with food, the island was being occupied by soviet forces."

Asked by a commons member if he was aware of Swedish anxiety over the Russian occupation, the foreign secretary said he knew nothing of such anxiety.

Bornholm is 22 miles southeast of the Swedish coast.

17 CAMPS WILL SHIFT YANKS FROM FRANCE

SUPREME HDQ. ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, PARIS, May 30 (AP)—Camp Baltimore, the first of 17 camps being established in central France to speed the redeployment of troops to other theaters, will get its first shipment of soldiers in the first half of June.

All the camps are named for American cities. They will be operated by the newly created assembly area command, which has the task of starting nearly 300,000 soldiers monthly on their way home or to the Pacific theater.

The 16 others will be Camps Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Norfolk, Miami, Detroit, Chicago, Oklahoma City, Washington, San Antonio, St. Louis, and New Orleans.

RED CRITICIZES U.S. PRESS ENTRY INTO GERMANY

Chicago Tribune Hit by Broadcaster

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—A Moscow radio speaker today said "there certainly is reason for uneasiness in journalistic circles about the American authorities' decision to allow all newspapers without exception to enter Germany."

Boris Isakov made the broadcast in English. Charging that there was a whispering campaign in Britain and the United States about a possible eventual war with the soviet union, Isakov said:

"Take the Hearst, McCormick, and Patterson papers, for instance. They are certainly not stopping at whispering. What you see there today could better be described as strident yells about a future war against Russia. And the Scripps-Howard press is not far behind in the same theme."

Isakov included the British Catholic Herald in his criticism. The broadcast was recorded by the soviet monitor here.

CITES EDITORIAL

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, replied to the Moscow radio speaker by calling attention to a recent editorial in which the newspaper said its readers "know we would oppose a Russian war with all the vigor at our command."

"This newspaper can't see what America has to gain by beating Russia that would be worth another million American casualties and the loss of two or three more years from the lives of 10,000,000 other boys, not to mention a couple of hundred billion dollars," the editorial said. It added:

"And what's more, the propaganda for a war against Russia isn't going to inflame us, because nobody can tell us anything about the horrors of the bolshevik regime that we and our readers don't already know."

MINES KILL 54 FRENCH CHILDREN IN MONTH; NAZIS CLEAR BEACHES

PARIS, May 30 [Reuters]—About 100,000 more German prisoners will clear mine fields from French holiday beaches where 54 children have been killed in a month by German explosives, Raymond Aubrac, director of mine clearance, said today. Ten thousand Germans already have been put to work at the task.

"There are about 1,160 square miles of French soil with 100,000,000 mines," Aubrac said. "Each square yard may have its mine, any of almost 150 types. In some seaside villages windows, chairs, and bottles have been found mined."

DAVIES WINDS UP LONDON PARLEY; SEES RED ENVOY

Truman's Agent Visits Eisenhower Today

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—Joseph E. Davies, President Truman's special envoy, completed a series of conferences in London today amid increased indications that only a meeting of the Big Three could break deadlocks on European questions confronting the United States, Russia, and Britain.

A meeting of the leaders of the three countries was expected to be held shortly after the conclusion of the San Francisco conference, tentatively set for June 6.

Davies said he would fly to Paris tomorrow for a meeting with Gen. Eisenhower and then return to Washington to report to the President on the results of his conferences.

See Red Envoy

During the day he and John G. Winant, United States ambassador, conferred with Soviet Ambassador Fyodor Gusev, concluding three days of conferences with Prime Minister Churchill, Foreign Minister Eden, and other members of the British government.

Harry Hopkins, who went to Moscow on a personal mission for Mr. Truman, met with Stalin for the fourth time within a week.

A well informed diplomatic source in the soviet capital said that the talks of Stalin and Hopkins had covered a great many matters and would have "a far-reaching effect" in tightening collaboration between the United States and soviet Russia. This source said that personal faith and confidence count heavily in carrying on official discussions with the Russians and that Hopkins is regarded in Moscow as a friend.

Eden Avoids Discussion

In commons Eden today avoided a full dress discussion of foreign issues. The foreign minister indicated that little progress had been made since his return from the San Francisco conference two weeks ago when he said there were a number of "serious and disquieting" issues facing the Big Three.

Two new problems disturbing the international scene have arisen since then—threat of revolt in the Levant thru the landing of new French troops in Syria and Lebanon, and British and American difficulties with Marshal Tito, who has Moscow's sympathy in the Yugoslav occupation of Trieste.

Britain and America are reportedly standing united on two of the main issues Poland and Austria.

Eden frankly told commons today that the next move in both questions was up to Moscow.

He also said that Britain had no intention of recognizing the Austrian provisional government headed by Dr. Karl Renner until the British section of the allied commission in Austria had a chance of "seeing for itself."

Eden said that the allied commission "should be in Vienna." The Russians conquered the Austrian capital.

EXPECT WAVELL TO RETURN TO INDIA THIS WEEK

LONDON, May 30 [Reuters]—L. S. Amery, secretary of state for India, said in the house of commons today that Viceroy Wavell expected to return to India at the end of this week.

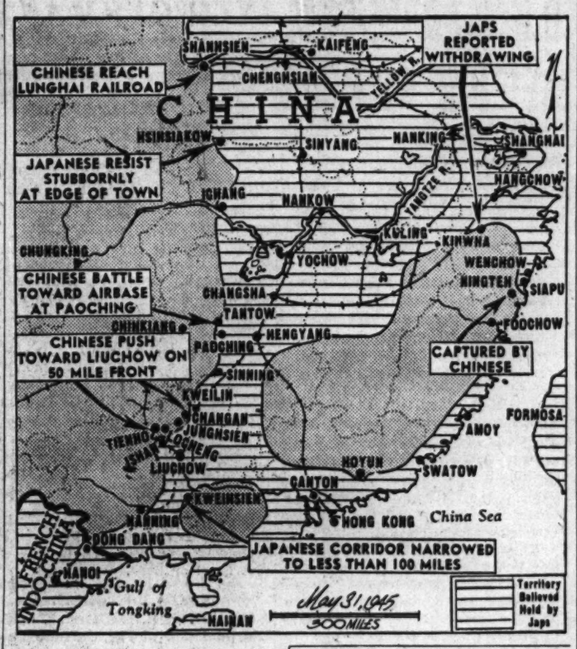
John Wardlaw Milne, Conservative, had asked whether Amery had any statement to make regarding his conversation with Wavell during the viceroy's visit to Britain.

Amery said in a written reply: "Lord Wavell expects to return to India at the end of this week. It is not intended that a statement be made until after his arrival in India."

FIRE SWEEPS TWO CITY BLOCKS

Mahanoy City, Pa., May 30 [AP]—Nearly two blocks in the business section were leveled today in a fire which caused damage estimated at a million dollars.

Chinese Closing Jap Corridor



JAPS PUT TORCH TO FORMER U. S. AIR BASE TOWN

Chinese Attack Along 50 Mile Front

CHUNGKING, May 30 (AP)—Chinese veterans, striking at Japanese forces reportedly pulling out of south China, ripped along a 50 mile front tonight toward the great former American air base city of Liuchow, now swept by fires.

Battering seven miles thru Japanese fortifications, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's battle groups reached the outskirts of the fortified Japanese stronghold of Ishan, 43 miles west of Liuchow.

Great fires were reported raging in the Kwangsi province rail hub as the Japanese garrison apparently put the torch to the city yesterday. Chungking was flooded with reports that the Japanese were planning to evacuate Liuchow.

Junction of Railroad

Liuchow is the junction point of the important north-south Hunan-Kwangsi railroad and the east-west Kwangi-Kweiyang [Kewichow] railroad.

The high command said the Japanese were evacuating Tienho, Locheng, Changan, and Junghsien, in an arc 50 miles north and 52 miles northwest of Liuchow.

Reports said the Japanese were withdrawing from Kweihsien, an important river port 85 miles southeast of Liuchow on the east flank of the Japanese trans-China corridor. One hundred miles to the west, the Chinese were biting deeper into the west flank from Yungning.

Fighting raged elsewhere along the 900 mile front from the Indo-China border to the Yellow river in north central China. United States 14th air force bombers and fighters blasted and strafed Japanese operated railroads along the entire front.

Battle Toward Air Base

Chinese forces battled toward a former United States air base at Shaoyang [Paoching]. After a night long engagement, the Chinese yesterday breached enemy defenses near Tantow, 19 miles northwest of Shaoyang, and cut the invaders into several pockets.

At the north end of the Chinese front, Chiang Kai-shek's troops, streaming from the south, cut a highway leading west to Shensi province from the endangered enemy stronghold of Hsihsiakow.

Along China's east coast, forces in Fukien province captured Ningteh, 41 miles northeast of liberated Foochow, after the town changed hands several times.

SUICIDE JAPS SLOW INDIANS' BURMA ADVANCE

CALCUTTA, India, May 30 (AP)—Suicidal Japanese charges slowed the advance of the Indian 19th division today on the Toungoo-Mawchi road north of Rangoon as the enemy fought to keep open the escape route into Thailand. Empire forces have advanced 12 miles east of Toungoo along the road after several weeks of fighting.

In the intermediate area northwest of Pegu, trapped Japanese concentrations were consolidating. Pegu is 43 miles northeast of Rangoon. The Japanese still hold a bridgehead across the Irrawaddy river and have made seven futile attempts to break out and escape eastward.

Heavy bombers of the strategic air force of the Eastern Air command raided Moulmein for the second time in three days, dropping hundreds of tons of bombs with good results on the last important enemy-held city in Burma, a bulletin said.

Greeks Get 220,000 Tons of Relief Goods Monthly

LONDON, May 30 [Reuters]—Petros Vulgaris, Greek premier, was quoted in a Greek broadcast today as saying allied aid in relief and raw materials was being unloaded at Greek ports at the rate of 220,000 tons a month. Experts had estimated that this relief, added to available resources, would create an adequate basis for Greece's economic restoration.

AUTOMATIC EMERGENCY CREDIT
(When You Need a Loan, Write a Check)

$25.00 is not a lot of money, but sometimes it can be vitally important.

Small sums such as this are borrowed daily by millions of people from friends, relatives, employers. Such borrowings are troublesome not because they are difficult to repay, but because they are embarrassing to ask for. And because they are small, we know they are sometimes overlooked and personal friendships jeopardized.

That is why a person opening a 5c per check (no minimum balance) account here, has the privilege of arranging for Automatic Credit—which allows him to write a check for as much as $25 more than he has in the bank—whenever he needs a loan.

Because the charge for this service is small ($1) and the method of repaying so convenient and automatic, some depositors, we realize, might form the habit of using the borrowing privilege unwisely. We therefore respectfully urge each Check-Credit client to use his or her borrowing privilege only to perform the friendly, useful and real service for which it is designed . . . to conveniently meet the occasional small emergencies that arise in these modern times.

Check-Credit is just another expression of this bank's policy—providing financial services designed to our customers' needs. Call personally, write, or phone Whitehall 4500 for full particulars.

DELEGATES HUNT OOMPHY NAME FOR WORLD UNIT

At Moment Title Issue Is in Snafu Stage

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., May 30—They're talking about a name for the new international organization in 22 languages today, but it takes an American term to describe what they want the name to have—oomph.

Gentlemen in turbans, gentlemen in fezzes, and gentlemen in hombergs are turning thumbs down on calling the global agency being established here "the United Nations." Most of them just don't like it, but the Venezuelans are understood to have a definite objection to it: That it will recall the war when it ought to be forgotten.

Flock of Suggestions

Enthusiastic visitors from Central and South American countries are coming up with new suggestions by the dozen. But some one in a robe or a long beard or gaiters usually pops up with a lament in diplomatic language which the interpreters say means the title's lacking in snap, wham, oomph, and zingo.

The problem of giving the baby a name has definitely reached a stage termed by diplomats [the less formal ones] as Snafu.

The Ecuadorians have suggested two names — the Juridical Community of States and the International Juridical association. Mexico leans to the Permanent Union of Nations. Cuba's entry is the World Community of Nations.

Have to Be Careful

See what the critics mean about no oomph?

You have to be careful about naming an organization anyway because the initial letters of the title are bound to be used to form a word as when the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration became UNRRA. Well, you might agree on a name and then discovered that the first letters spelled a word that would make people blush in one of the 49 countries represented here.

The islands in question are the Marshall, Caroline, and Marianas archipelagoes, held by Japan under a mandate of the first league of nations; the Volcanos, including Iwo Island, and the Ryukyus, including Okinawa. A possible addition is the Bonin group.

The United States, Great Britain, France, and China had agreed to a provision that drew a distinction between the present British, French, and Dutch colonies and territories that may be placed in trusteeships, including present allied mandates. Among the objectives assured the colonies was self-government, but for the trusteeship territories the hope held out was not only self-government but independence.

The distinction was due to the refusal of the British to go farther than to approve self-government for India and the colonies on a dominion status within the empire.

Seek "Self-Determination"

The Russians have come back with the proposal to assure all dependent peoples, including not only trust territories but existing colonies, the "self-determination" that is mentioned in the league's proposed preamble as one of the principles on which the organization is founded.

Concurrently with these developments there were new complications in the framing of the peace league charter.

There were outbreaks of nationalism all over the place. From quarters habitually placing the blame for the second World war on America's failure to join the Wilson league have come threats to adopt reservations to the new league charter, if not to stay out of the organization altogether.

The French charged their national interest was seriously affected by an amendment proposed by the four powers sponsoring the international security conference — the United States, Great Britain, Russia, and China. Under this amendment France and Russia, in pursuance of their mutual assistance treaty, could repel an aggression by a resurgent Germany without getting permission from the league's security council.

Termination Provided

But this dispensation is to terminate when the league may, "by consent of the governments concerned," be charged with the responsibility of dealing with aggression by any of the axis nations. The French want such termination of their own responsibilities to be not by their "consent" but by their "request."

French Chief Delegate Paul-Boncour asserted that the effect of the Big Four amendment would be to cancel the Franco-Russian pact.

The French, who are in favor of internationalism for America and nationalism for France, and the Russians, who are famed practitioners of "Russia first," also bore down on the other members of the Big Five with complaints that their interests had been sacrificed by the internationalists in the regional amendment in which the Monroe doctrine was muzzled.

Outcry in United States Recalled

The American nationalists had made great outcry against the supercession of the Monroe doctrine, proposed by Dumbarton Oaks, but all in vain. The internationalists put thru an amendment subordinating the Monroe doctrine to the league's world peace enforcement machinery except in case of an actual attack on a nation in this hemisphere.

The French and the Russians had approved with alacrity this internationalist device for clipping the wings of America's Monroe doctrine but the more they thought about it the more they were convinced they had done themselves out of their national interest to act instantly against aggression by Germany without getting the consent of the security council.

Provision Boomerangs

But now, under the regional amendment deflating the Monroe Doctrine, it appeared that they had let themselves in for an agreement that they could not act until "an armed attack occurs.

This treatment that had been dished out to the Monroe Doctrine was so unapalatable to the French when applied to their own national interest that Paul Boncour loosed a lot of volcanic oratory against it in the Big Five meeting. He was supported by the Russians but opposed by the Americans, who withheld approval of a compromise pending further study.

It was with threats of reservations, if not refusal to join the league altogether, that Canada, the Netherlands, and other "middle powers" exacted from the Big Five an agreement on an amendment whereby any country furnishing contingents to the international police force shall have a seat and a voice in the security council whenever the employment of its armed forces is considered.

It transpires that both Canadian Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and Netherlands Foregin Minister Eelco Van Kleffens had some heated sessions with the Big Five on this matter before they went home to wrestle with domestic problems. They took their stand on the principle of the American revolution slogan of "no taxation without representation." They raised the cry of "no vote, no fight."

CANNON AND TABER BATTLE AGAIN; THIS TIME IT'S VERBAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., May 30—Representatives Cannon [D., Mo.] and Taber [R., N. Y.], fought a second round today but no punches were landed this time. The battle was confined to speeches by each in the house.

The 66 year old Cannon, chairman of the appropriations committee, took the floor to give his version of yesterday's bout in Cannon's office, where Taber, who is 65, got a bloody lip and the chairman was pinned down on a couch, according to the New Yorker's version.

"I didn't start it," said Cannon, who refused yesterday to discuss the fracas. "The incident resulted from the gentleman's [Taber] seizing me by the shoulder and making a very insulting remark to me on the house floor."

Cannon, while refraining from matching what he called Taber's "lurid" account of the set-to, said: "The gentleman from New York referred in highest terms to his prowess. But he neglected to state that he ran out of the room, and that he continued to his office and remained there."

This brought a smile from the members, including Taber.

"There have been many things preceding the culmination in this attack," Taber told the house. "The gentlemen from Missouri has not been easy to get along with.",

Amarillo, Tex., May 30 (AP)—The Amarillo Globe says in a dispatch from Uvalde, Tex., that former Vice President Garner has declined a request from President Truman that he return to Washington for responsible work with the government, probably a cabinet post."

John McCarty, a member of the newspaper's staff, who visited with Garner in Uvalde, reported Garner declined an "urgent request" of the President because of the illness of Mrs. Garner.

McCarty said he asked Garner for a statement on what the President wanted him to do and Garner said "anything I wanted to do."

SOL BLOOM GETS PARLEY FLOOR AFTER 6 WEEKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., May 30—The voice of Rep. Bloom, Tammany Democrat from New York City and chairman of the house foreign affairs committee, has not been heard in the international councils here since he arrived six weeks ago as an American delegate to the world security conference.

There was a stir of excitement, then, when Bloom arose at an open commission session in the civic opera house today and shouted something. Delegates craned their necks, a buzz of speculation was heard. What was the American delegate proposing?

Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, presiding, said he couldn't hear Mr. Bloom and asked him to ascend the rostrum and address the delegates. Bloom yelled louder.

"All I wanted to say," he shouted, "was that we can't hear back here!"

REPORT ATTLEE MAY STEP DOWN AS LABOR CHIEF

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Mal 30—Clement R. Attlee soon may be replaced as leader of the Labor party by former Home Secretary Morrison or former Labor Minister Bevin, it was reported in political circles tonight.

The leader of the party would become prime minister if the Laborites won the election and there was a feeling in some quarters that the Laborites need a man with more color and drive than is possessed by the quiet, somewhat retiring Attlee.

Some observers think Attlee would step down if sufficient pressure were brought to bear. If Attlee were shelved, it was considered Bevin has the best chance of replacing him.

CHICAGO HONORS ITS WAR HEROES, DEAD AND LIVING

City Bows at Graves and Hails Clark's Men

The dead and the living of America's wars were honored in Chicago yesterday in Memorial day observances which ranged from reverent ceremonies in cemeteries to a mighty parade saluting Gen. Clark and 50 fellow heroes of the victorious allied campaign in Italy.

More than a million Chicagoans observed the day. Thousands attended special church services, other thousands visited cemeteries and decorated hero graves, and still more thousands—police estimated 750,000 — lined the 15 mile parade route to see Gen. Clark.

The weather was ideal, warm and sunny, and many who did not participate in Memorial day events went to parks and beaches for relaxation.

Three Transports Bring Guests

The most colorful events attended the arrival of Gen. Clark and his party. The general, who commanded allied armies in Italy, and 10 general officers, 20 lesser officers, and 22 enlisted men arrived at the airport after a leisurely flight from Paris.

Crowds pressed against guarded fences long before 1 p. m., the scheduled hour of Clark's arrival. Inside the field were Mayor Kelly, Maj. Gen. David McCoach Jr., head of the 6th service command, and numerous other city and military dignitaries.

Shortly after 1 p. m. 12 escort planes appeared and flew away. A few minutes later came 35 escort planes. Behind them, sparkling in the blue skies, flew three silvery transports containing the 5th army overseas fighters.

Gen. Clark First to Emerge

The escorts veered off, then the transports landed one by one. Capt. Robb MacKie, chief of staff of the 6th service command, stepped up to the first as the door opened and Gen. Clark emerged. Mayor Kelly also stepped forward. "This is the best trip we've had in a long time," remarked Gen. Clark.

GI Joes, lieutenants, captains, majors, colonels, and generals then alighted. They grinned, laughed, and waved. The waiting friends, relatives, and other spectators waved back, shouted, and cheered. For the 22 enlisted men in the party it was an unusually happy event—the prelude to honorable discharge.

Then began the long parade from the airport to the Congress st. plaza. Even the sparse residential areas east of the air field contained large numbers of spectators, who cheered the general and his men.

60,000 See Civic Reception

As the parade moved east in 55th st. and deeper into more populated areas the sidewalk throngs grew. Applause was generous. At 33d st. and Michigan av. navy V-12 students at the Illinois Institute of Technology stiffened to attention and Clark returned their salutes.

At Roosevelt rd. and Michigan av. the crowds lined up 10 and 12 deep. Inside the loop, along Jackson blvd. and State st. throngs were so dense that police had to open lanes. The parade moved around Wacker dr. into Michigan av., and south to the Congress st. plaza, where at least 60,000 persons were massed. A 17 gun salute greeted Gen. Clark and his men.

Mayor Kelly formally welcomed the visitors. "Each one of these soldiers is a hero in his own right, each has been decorated for courage," the mayor said.

Negro Soldiers Win Praise

Gen. Clark in his response thanked the mothers and fathers of the nation who, he said, have produced "such magnificent manhood" as the fighters who helped finish Germany. He also paid tribute to the diverse fighter groups which had served under him.

"Victory was brought about by people of many creeds and nationalities, all imbued with the love of freedom," Gen. Clark said. "The Poles attacked magnificently. We had Italian, New Zealand, Indian, Brazilian, and Japanese-American troops. Our Negro troops were among our most valuable assets."

The general predicted that "we will hand our despised Jap enemy a trouncing just like the one we handed the dictators in Europe."

Mrs. Clark and the Clark's daughter, Ann, were on the reviewing stand. After the ceremony, the general and his men moved to the Palmer House, where joyous reunions with relatives were held.

Mihailovitch Being Sought

Later, at a press conference, Gen. Clark was asked the status of Gen. Draja Mihailovitch, former Yugoslav war minister and leader of the Chetniks, whose enemies have accused him of collaborating with the axis.

"We are still looking for Gen. Mihailovitch," Clark said. "When I left the Trieste area four days ago it was thought he would be located soon. If he comes into our hands it will be up to the allied governments, not the military, as to whether he would be turned over to Marshal Tito."

Gen. Clark had a word for Tito, too—that firm handling of the marshal probably would ease the Trieste crisis.

In the evening Gen. Clark, his officers and men were honored at a dinner in the Palmer House attended by Gov. Green, Mayor Kelly, and 650 local government officials, army and navy officers, and consular attaches. A gold medal from the city was presented to him.

Gen. Clark lauded the enlisted men, saying that they had seen Europe destroyed, and had kept our country from being destroyed. "I thanked God as I flew over the country today to see that it had been allowed to stay the same," he said.

Earlier in the day the traditional rites of Memorial day were held. Generally, the observances were sober and quiet. In 122 cemeteries the graves of war veterans were decorated with flowers and flags, generally under the aegis of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Tributes Paid Marine Dead

Special tribute to the marine dead was paid by Sen. Brooks [R., Ill.] at the grave of George Shanks, past commander of Marine post, in Rosehill cemetery, and by the Marine Corps league at St. Mary's cemetery.

Graves of nonveterans also were decorated in most cemeteries in accordance with the trend of recent years in which Memorial day has been informally expanded as a special day of respect to all dead.

At Vaughan General hospital, near Maywood, four wounded fighters spoke, and in the chapel at Gardiner General hospital Chaplain Francis J. Gorman, a veteran of South Pacific warfare, conducted religious services.

Eight Chicagoans were among 200 marines and sailors who were awarded the Purple Heart in ceremonies at the Great Lakes Naval Center hospital.

In other ceremonies medals were presented posthumously to seven soldiers killed in action and in person to two honorably discharged soldiers. The living recipients were Howard K. Soemo, 2640 Medill av., who won the Purple Heart, and John M. Langland, 1921 Noyes st., Evanston, who received the bronze star.

Nearest Kin Get Medals

The posthumous awards were presented by Lt. J. D. Krisor to the nearest of kin of the six dead heroes.

The medals were the silver star to Emil Garippo, 733 Arthington st., father of Pvt. Michael A. Garippo; bronze star to Anthony Nichilo, 1145 Independence blvd., father of Pvt. Attilio J. Nichilo; silver star to Mrs. Rosalie F. De Tomaso, 1520 Erie st., widow of Pvt. Domenic D. De Tomaso; bronze star to Mrs. Alvina Gielow, 2308 Keystone av., mother of Sgt. Raymond Gielow; bronze star to Mrs. Mary Steen, 4216 N. Keeler av., mother of Staff Sgt. William F. Steen; bronze star to Mrs. Josephine House, 7722 Marshfield av., widow of Tech. 5th Grade Richard C. House, and silver star to Jack Lihota, 2, 13149 Avenue O, son of Pvt. John W. Lihota.

The day's ceremonies carried one grim note. War plants worked as usual. The war with Japan is not yet ended.

CLARK FLIGHT TESTS EUROPE TO CHICAGO COMMERCIAL ROUTE

Gen. Clark and his 50 heroes were flown to Chicago by regular American Airlines pilots and crews under contract with the army transport command. This is the first trip, the airline announced, to be made by regular commercial crews over the route for direct flight from Europe to Chicago. The line has an application pending for such a route.

The party was flown in on three C-54s. The plane in which Gen. Clark was a passenger was piloted by Capt. James Burns with Bernie Gann as co-pilot. The second ship was in command of Capt. James Hay and Co-pilot Cy Bitner, and the third was piloted by Capt. Al De Witt and Co-pilot Edward Bowe. Each ship had a crew of six.

The party left Paris at 9:30 p. m. [Chicago time] Monday and arrived in Chicago at 1:13 p. m. yesterday. The flight paused for refueling in the Azores and stopped overnight at Presque Isle, Me., a regular port on the air transport command flight.

HEROES, KIN REUNITED

The love of mother for son, of wife for husband, was a dominant note yesterday when the medal bedecked 5th army and air forces heroes, who flew from Paris with Gen. Clark, arrived in Chicago.

After glimpsing the men at the airport in the afternoon relatives had a chance to embrace them and talk to them later in the Palmer House. Many of the enlisted men and officers had not seen their families for a year or more.

One Wife Eludes Guards

One wife, Mrs. Lois Olsen, Sycamore, De Kalb county, eluded guards at the airport and ran closer. When she saw her husband, Sgt. Frank B. Olsen, a veteran of the 10th mountain division, she called "Frank! Frank!" but he didn't hear.

A family which appeared at the airport and hurried to the hotel was that of Sgt. Eugene L. Dombrowski. It included his wife, Ruth, of 3221 Wilson av.; his son, Gary, 2, whose father hadn't seen him since he was an infant; the sergeant's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Dombrowski of 2449 N. California av., and his brother, Robert, 10.

The family of Sgt. Elmer Grimm split up, some waiting at the airport and others at the Congress st. plaza. The relatives included his wife, Elinor, of 520 S. 52d av., Cicero; his sister, Mrs. Marion Mitch, of 7802 Ogden av., Lyons, and his brother, Gustave, of 3936 W. 56th st.

Illness Can't Stop Mother

Sgt. Frank J. Gold's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Gold, of 3317 Grove av., Berwyn, were absent from the airport because of Mrs. Gold's illness. His sister, Mrs. Charles Buda, of 3654 S. Drake av., watched for the sergeant there. Mrs. Gold went to the loop later, however, for a reunion with her son.

Mrs. Peter Reichert of 5749 School st. went to the airport with her husband and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Baum, of the same address, hoping for a glimpse of Lt. Kenneth E. Reichert, a B-24 bombardier with 24 missions to his credit.

Mrs. Goro Tsuchida, 1130 N. Clark st., stood on the sidewalk below the Congress st. reviewing stand and embraced her son silently while he leaned over the railing to kiss her.

Other Reunions at Hotel

Among the reunions in the Palmer House were those of Sgt. Loyes Craig Jr. and his wife, Helen, of 2504 Trumbull av.; Lt. Thomas W. Jefferson, Negro, P-51 pilot, and his mother, Mildred, of 6231 Wabash av.; Lt. Bernard Lynch, battalion intelligence officer, and his father, W. J. Lynch, and sister, Catherine, of 516 Park av., River Forest.

Other family groups were Lt. Albert Loving Jr., Negro, field artillery man, and his parents, of 5327 Indiana av.; Tech. Sgt. Brence Jackson of Three Oaks, Mich., and his brother, Charles, and sister, Alene, and Tech. Sgt. Edward Kahl Jr. of Elgin, greeted by his parents and Miss Joan Collins, also of Elgin.

YANKS PAY TRIBUTE TO COMRADES WHO DIED IN RYUKYUS

OKINAWA, May 30 (AP)—The thousands of young Americans who sleep under Ryukyuan soil or who died in waters adjoining these islands had their sad day of tribute on this Memorial day.

No flower garden at its best, the Yanks on Okinawa somehow produced floral wreaths in touching quantity and of surprising beauty for this day—enough to brighten every American cemetery.

Lt. Gen. Simon B. Buckner Jr., commander of the 10th army, delivered the Memorial day address at the 7th infantry division burial ground.

Many of the 300 chaplains on Okinawa, headed by Col. Roy Hillyer of Hiawatha, Kas., conducted services which were attended by hundreds of service men.

Memorial day services also were held on occupied islands near-by and aboard many ships in this area as well as in war battered Naha at the tombs of six members of Commodore Perry's crew who died on Okinawa a century ago.

FRANCE INSISTS ON OCCUPYING NORTHERN ITALY

San Francisco, Cal., May 30 (AP)—France told other allied nations delegations today she intends to hold the Aosta valley in northwestern Italy until the allies answer her request for a definite occupation zone in Germany.

The official "France Journal," distributed at the security conference, said the French had made this request six months ago.

It added that enough French troops had perished in the Italian campaign "to give the French army the right to occupy Italian soil it had conquered."

First American Soldiers Welcomed to Dublin

DUBLIN, Erie, May 30—Dubliners today saw American soldiers in uniform strolling thru O'Connell street for the first time since United States forces came to Europe. On all sides they were greeted with smiles and warmly received.

HOPE OF WORLD RESTS ON U.S., BROOKS WARNS

American representative government is the hope of humanity more than at any other time in history, Sen. Brooks [R., Ill.] declared last night at the memorial dedication of the William Parichy stadium in Forest Park.

The chaos of Europe is even greater today than before Germany was defeated, declared Sen. Brooks, who recently returned from a 15,000 mile trip thru western Europe. He warned that, with millions in Europe displaced, other millions without homes and hungry and with stable governments a rarity, conditions will grow worse.

"The challenge to representative government resulting from the bitterness that has come out of this war is greater than ever before in the history of our country," the senator declared. "We must be prepared to defend it, even to the extent of giving up our lives as the heroes we honor here today have done."

Mayor Fred Becker of Forest Park paid tribute to William Parichy, navy quartermaster killed on the eve of D day when his ship was blown up by a mine off the Normandy coast, and to Forest Park's other hero dead of World War II.

You Need Big Red Blood Cells to Release Energy

If your oxygen-carrying, energy-releasing red cells aren't sufficiently large and rich, you can't hope to keep your full vigor. Your blood is the "supply line" of energy to every muscle, every fibre of your body.

Better Blood, More Energy with Ironized Yeast

Yes, if you grow fatigued with little effort—if you're continually pale and pepless—you may have Borderline Anemia. But there is a way to improved vitality—easy-to-take Ironized Yeast Tablets can help you!

Of course your condition might be due to other causes, so your doctor should be consulted regularly. If you have a Borderline Anemia*, Ironized Yeast Tablets will help you by building up your blood . . . by renewing your energy.

Start taking Ironized Yeast Tablets today to look better, to feel better, to be better. Insist on genuine Ironized Yeast. At all drug stores.

Energy-Building Blood

This is what the doctor sees through his microscope looking at blood rich in energy-elements. Note big, plentiful red cells that carry oxygen to release energy to every muscle, limb, tissue.

Borderline Anemia

Thousands have blood like this—and never know it. Note puny size and irregular shape of red cells. Blood like this can't generate the energy you need! Only sturdy blood can give you top energy.

U. S. MOURNS ITS MILITARY DEAD; STICKS TO JOBS

Yanks Honor Their Fallen Comrades

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Americans everywhere—at home, in the now quiet European war areas, and in the Pacific battle theaters—paused yesterday to mourn the military dead of this and past wars.

Parades, religious services, and simple holiday ceremonies marked the observance of the 77th Memorial day thruout the nation while overseas thousands of fighting men and women attended special services or visited cemeteries where their fallen buddies lie.

Many war plants, their sights fixed on victory over Japan, worked as usual as did most government offices.

240 Civil War Vets

Only a handful of the 240 remaining Civil war veterans were able to join in celebrating the day which was inaugurated in honor of their dead comrades.

Wreaths were placed on the tombs of the unknown soldier of World War I. in London, Paris, and in Arlington national cemetery.

At Hyde Park, N. Y., two small children laid a wreath of spring flowers on the grave of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Buglers sounded taps over the graves of the dead thruout the European battle zones as soldiers silently placed American flags and flowers in military cemeteries.

Services were held at 62 American cemeteries in France, holding nearly 150,000 Americans who lost their lives in two wars. Observances also were held in Germany, where more than 8,000 Americans lie in temporary graves.

On Guam, floral wreaths made by natives were placed on graves. Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish chaplains conducted services.

Honor Franklin Dead

Across the Potomac at Arlington cemetery War Mobilizer Vinson said: "The homage we pay our dead here today will be a mockery unless we use to the utmost the opportunity for which they fought and died."

He predicted the San Francisco conference and other international meetings would succeed "because the people of the world have demanded it."

In New York City more than 300 survivors of the bomb battered Franklin paid honor to those who died aboard the carrier when it was struck by Japanese bombs.

About 250,000 persons lined the streets to watch holiday parades in Manhattan and the Bronx.

TAFT CHARGES SECRET DRIVE ON PEACE DRAFT

Gettysburg, Pa., May 30 (AP)—Sen. Taft [R., O.] said today that "secret" government propaganda is being used in support of compulsory post-war military training.

The Ohioan spoke at a Memorial day observance in the Gettysburg National cemetery where 800 school children placed flowers on graves of 3,900 soldiers killed in the Civil war.

Taft said "there is no doubt" that the government, particularly the war and navy departments, "are straining every nerve to secure enactment" of compulsory military training before the war ends.

Favors Voluntary System

He told an estimated 1,200 persons that "we are indeed bankrupt of ideas if we cannot provide a method by which necessary military forces and reserves are provided [during peace time] by an American voluntary system."

Taft called for consideration of the issue "by argument and not by propaganda," adding if "the methods being used . . . are successful they can be used to fasten upon us every kind of regulation, price control for business, wage control for labor, production control for farmers."

The senator said "secret meetings are being held in the Pentagon building and elsewhere" in referring to support of the military training issue."

Call Women's Groups

Taft contended that on April 26 "chief executive officers of some 40 or more women's organizations were invited" to Washington. ". . . It is said they were addressed by" Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, Undersecretary of State Grew, Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Adm. Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations "and other high ranking officers."

EXPEL GERMAN WIFE OF DANISH KING'S BROTHER

Pro-Nazi Princess Is Banished by Monarch

BY EINAR CHRISTIANSEN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 30—Princess Helena, wife of King Christian's brother, Prince Harald, was banished today from Denmark by royal command. The couple married in 1909.

The king signed the orders expelling the German born princess whose open pro-Nazi sympathies during the country's occupation vexed the royal family and made the home life of her husband and children most difficult.

The princess arrived at Dastrup airdrome by car, accompanied by Prince Harald and their family. All kissed the princess. Her son-in-law, Prince Knud, husband of her daughter, Caroline Mathilde, and youngest son of the Danish king, also was present and bid her good-bye with a handshake. As the privately chartered plane, piloted by a Lt. Simonsen, took off, Harald waved a last farewell. It is understood that Helena intends to live with relatives in Sonder-Gluecksburg, Germany.

Associated with Nazis

During the German occupation Helena frequently associated with German officers, including the notorious Gestapo chief, SS Gen. Pancke, and his mistress, Baroness von Busch. When German officers visited the princess at her home, Harald would leave or remain in his room, feigning illness. The entire royal family disapproved Helena's behavior.

Her marriage to Prince Harald is generally expected to be dissolved.

Children Opposed Germans

Helena's oldest son, Prince Gorm, a lieutenant in the Danish army, who fled to Sweden after the German blitzkrieg, recently returned as a member of the Danish brigade trained in Sweden. Her youngest son, Prince Olav, took an active part in the Danish resistance. A daughter, Princess Alexandrine Louise, shortly before the war married a German, Count Castell, who died in 1941.

Czech Reserves Ordered to Mobilize, Says Prague

New York, May 30 (AP)—The Prague radio said tonight President Eduard Benes had ordered mobilization of all Czechoslovak reserve forces for "special military service for a period of urgent necessity." In San Francisco Jan. Masaryk, Czechoslovakia's foreign minister, said the mobilization of reserve forces is merely an attempt to regain a normal army.

U.S. COLORS WAVE IN MUNICH AT MEMORIAL RITES

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MUNICH, Germany, May 30—In Munich's Koenigsplatz where Hitler and Mussolini sealed their alliance in 1937 with a giant schutzstaffel [elite guard] parade, units of the United States 45th infantry division held memorial services today.

It was an unpretentious, moving ceremony. Maj. Gen. Robert Frederick addressed the men with whom he fought in the front lines to defeat the axis forces.

The colors of the 157th, 79th, and 180th infantry regiments floated in the sunshine while 2,000 men stood on the parade ground vainly trying to hear the invocations of Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish chaplains and the general's address. In an effort to avoid imitating the loudness of demonstrations held in this square in preceding years, American loudspeakers were turned down too low.

In September, 1937, the population of Munich packed the square to see Hitler and Mussolini, while the heavy booted schutzstaffel, whose main job was to run concentration camps, goose stepped past the fuehrer. This time the population was kept off the square.

FRENCH FORCES SHELL AND BOMB SYRIAN CAPITAL

Battle Rages Thruout Day in Damascus

a show of force with armored cars in the vicinity of parliament, where Jamil Mardam Bey, the acting prime minister, was forced to call off the proposed session because there was not a quorum. French troops occupied the parliament building at 1 a. m. today.

Shortly after Mardam Bey reached the Serail, the Syrian local administrative building, the shooting began. It apparently originated in the escape of a Syrian deserter from the French army, who ran into a crowd of Syrian civilians.

They tried to protect the deserter, and French troops who saw the incident fired and the shots were returned. The crowd scrambled for safety and the shooting spread.

Churchill Sends Message

Prime Minister Churchill had sent a message to Mardam Bey, counselling the Syrians to be tolerant and calm until the situation is more settled. Mardam Bey who received the message yesterday afternoon, had meant to read it out at once in parliament. But it was never read.

A report has just reached Damascus that between 1,600 and 1,800 Druse tribesmen enlisted in the French army have surrendered with their French officers to Patriots in the mountainous Djebel Druse country on the Transjordan frontier 50 miles south of Damascus.

A large quantity of arms, ammunition, and a few armored vehicles were stated to be in the possession of the Druse irregulars.

Telegraph Office Hit

The telegraph office was hit last night, and one operator is reported to have been killed and another injured. Communications, apart from military ones, have largely broken down.

About 20 women and children were evacuated for safety to the British transit camp outside the city.

The American and British ministers, who are working in close cooperation, have made urgent reports to their respective governments.

British Envoy Terence Shone, traveling in an armored car, visited President Kuwatly this morning. Mrs. Shone has been injured in the eye by a glass splinter caused by one of two bullets which found their way into the dining room of the British legation.

The Syrian mayor of Hama has appealed to British military authorities to arrange an armistice at Hama for the collection of dead and wounded civilians, estimated to number 200.

Say French Burn Grain.

The French are reported to have burned 50 tons of wheat and barley and 100 tons of other cereals at Hama.

Other reports said the Syrians have captured a French stronghold at Derah and taken French troops as hostages in case of bombardment. At Soueida, also in southern Syria, French officers and a French political officer have been taken prisoner.

Exchange telegraph reported from Cairo that the Egyptian government had protested to Britain, the United States, France, and Russia regarding the situation in Syria and said the staff of the Egyptian legation had taken refuge in the Iraq legation in Damascus.

British Cabinet in Session

LONDON, May 30 (AP) — Foreign Secretary Eden told commons tonight that the British cabinet was in emergency session on the warlike situation in Damascus where he said French-Arab fighting had caused "a serious loss of life and destruction of property."

It was expected that Eden or Prime Minister Churchill will make a full statement on the situation in Syria and Lebanon in commons tomorrow.

With the situation in the Levant "greatly deteriorated," Eden said his government was "in actual communication with the United States government."

Serious dsorders, Eden said, had taken place for several days at Aleppo in northern Syria, and at Homs and Hama, 85 and 110 miles north of the capital. "We have been trying for months past to promote final settlement of the situation, the dangers of which were apparent to us all." As a result, he said, the chances of negotiation between the French and the Levant states had been by no means unhopeful. "But in the last few days all this improvement has been entirely swept away."

Troops Still in Syria

Eden told commons that British troops still were in Syria, when he denied a statement by Maj. Gen. Edward Spears, former British minister to Lebanon and Syria, that British troops had been withdrawn.

The British, he said, were prepared, however, "to withdraw all our troops from Syria and Lebanon as soon as an agreement was reached between the French and the Levant states."

"It is time they [the French] were told quite straight where to get off," declared R. R. Stokes, a Laborite. "The French are behaving as if they had won the war."

Maj. W. W. Astor, Conservative, urged that President Truman take a prominent part in the mediation of the dispute. "What does San Francisco mean if immediately there are two members of the united nations shooting each other up?"

[A Reuters dispatch reported Astor also as saying that since Transjordan and Palestine adjoin the Syria-Lebanon area, there was danger that trouble might spread and involve the Suez canal zone, adding that the safety of this region was vital to British interests and to supply lines to the far east.]

IRAN DEMANDS WITHDRAWAL OF ALLIED TROOPS

TEHRAN, Iran, May 30 (AP)—With the European war ended, Iran today demanded that the United States, Britain, and Russia live up to their agreement to remove all troops from the country.

The treaty by which British and Russian forces operated in Iran [Persia] stipulated that they would leave within six months after hostilities ceased, and Iranian authorities viewed the period as dating from the German surrender.

Foreign Minister Sepahbodi told the Iranian parliament that identical notes had been sent to the Big Three allied powers.

"We demanded that in view of cessation of European hostilities, and in order to restore a normal situation in this country, British, American, and Russian troops evacuate Iran," he reported.

ENTERED IN 1941

Russian and British troops entered the rich oil country of Iran on Sept. 19, 1941, after joint notes had been sent to the Iranian government protesting against the activities of nazi agents there.

Reza Shah Pahlavi rejected the protests and refused to surrender or expel all axis nationals. He abdicated Sept. 16 in favor of his son, Shaphur Mohammed Reza, and three days later British and Russian armies drove in from the north and the south.

Americans joined in sending forces to Iran in 1942, when lend-lease supplies began moving across Iran to Russia by the Persian gulf route.

Americans Pulling Out

The Big Three meeting at Tehran in 1943 pledged post-war economic aid to Iran and agreed upon the "maintenance, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran."

The Americans began removing their Persian gulf command as long ago as January after a shorter supply line to Russia was opened thru the Dardanelles and the Black Sea, but American military railway service troops lingered.

Iran is one of the Arabian bloc of states estimated by oil experts as equal to the United States in petroleum deposits. Britain has a monopoly on oil concessions in Iran but American groups have a 60-40 edge in concessions in the entire area that embraces also Arabia, Iraq, Kuwait, Qatar, and Bahrein.

U. S. CONSULTS WITH PRINCIPALS IN SYRIA ROW

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—Acting State Secretary Grew said today the American government is deeply concerned about the Levantine dispute and is in active consultation with all parties involved.

Asked for comment on developments in Syria and Lebanon, Grew made this statement:

"Developments in Syria and Lebanon are causing the United States government deep concern. We are employing every means to assist in finding a peaceful solution and preventing further bloodshed and disorder. Consultations with all the parties involved are proceeding actively."

Grew's statement came after high official quarters in Washington had expressed pessimism over the tangled affairs of the two former French mandates.

INDIA PAPERS ASSAIL FRANCE IN LEVANT ISSUE

NEW DELHI, India, May 30 [Reuters]—Indian nationalist newspapers are showing strongly pro-Arab sympathy in their comments on the dispute between France and the Levant.

"France has fired the first shot at peace and French greed has provoked conditions approaching war in the Levant," the Hindustan Times, Congress party organ, said today. "If she deserves her newly won freedom, she must prove it in Syria and the Lebanon. France, as a symbol of imperialist domination, must quit."

Both the Times and the Moslem league's "Dawn" hinted at the possibility of future soviet intervention or pressure.

"There is a Russian army stationed in Persia, and Stalin knows something about oil politics which absorb the attention of Anglo-American capitalism," Dawn said. "While the Arab countries are on the boil, alienated Russia has potential advantages which we should recognize as we turn our eyes from the far east to India's northwest."

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

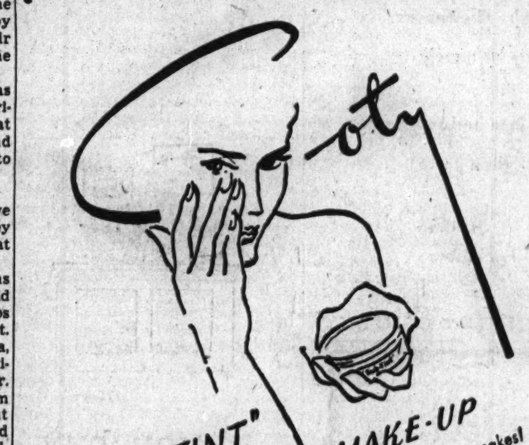
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.



What a dramatic difference it makes! Just a light film of "Sub-Tint" and your complexion looks smoother, clearer, velvet-soft. It never pulls or dries your skin. Light, Medium, Dark. $1. (plus tax)

BARE HUSH-HUSH ARMY DEVICES AT BOND SHOW

Signal corps equipment heretofore secret for reasons of military security, will go on exhibit at the "On to Tokyo" army show tomorrow in State st. north of Adams st. The show will be sponsored by the 6th service command, the treasury department, and the State Street council for the 7th war loan drive.

A single carrier cable, which automatically "scrambles" seven messages simultaneously so that wire tappers can pick up nothing but unintelligible squeaks and squeals, will be demonstrated. Two other exhibits will be a complete radio "net" consisting of combat type receivers and transmitters which will link the various exhibits at the show, and three magnetic wire recorders of the type used for on-the-spot recordings of actual combat operations.

A jeep painted red, white, and blue will be presented to the treasury department by Hyman Berg, president of the Jewish Men's club of Chicago, at State and Madison sts. at noon today. The jeep will be presented in behalf of the B'nai B'rith unit or men's club selling the greatest number of bonds.

HOW A SERGEANT UPSET ARMY BY SEIZING BRIDGE

BY DON WHITEHEAD

PARIS, May 30 (AP)—Events which thrill the world and change the course of history sometimes are as comical as they are dramatic when the full story becomes known.

Such was the case when the United States 1st army's 9th armored division seized the Remagen bridge and established an unexpected bridgehead across the Rhine.

All the story of that spectacular development in the last drive to defeat the German army was not told at the time. All the facts did not become known until days after the gallant charge led by Sgt. Alexander A. Drabik of Holland, O., which captured the span.

Grew Up Like Topsy

The capture was not in the plans. Nobody expected it and Maj. Gen. John W. Leonard, commander of the 9th armored division, found himself standing right in the middle of a history-making military operation which grew up like Topsy.

For months the high command had been making plans on how and where to cross the Rhine. In brief, the 1st army had begun to attack across the Roer river merely to protect the right flank of Gen. Simpson's 9th army. Once on the Rhine, the 1st army of Gen. Hodges was to stop while the Canadian, British and 9th armies massed their power for a grand crossing of the lower Rhine.

But Drabik's charge threw the army into turmoil, all the way up to supreme headquarters. And the army would have been in even greater turmoil had it known that, for the first 12 hours, the 1st army was holding the bridgehead with one company of infantry.

Luckily the Germans were more confused than the Americans. Three companies of infantry went across the Remagen bridge that night of March 7, but for some unexplained reason two companies returned to the west bank.

The situation began to sort itself out the next day and troops and armor flowed across despite the fact that columns were snarled in one of the biggest traffic jams of the invasion.

When the order came down to exploit the bridgehead, everybody took to the roads at once. Columns were piled up for mile upon mile. An ordinary three-hour jeep ride stretched into seven or eight hours. As units were fed across the bridge, they were sent directly into action.

"Dismount and Fight"

The situation reminded one of signs on the road near Maj. Gen. Terry Allen's 104th division: "Front line 500 yards ahead. Dismount and begin fighting."

A few weeks after the Remagen bridgehead was seized, this correspondent sat with Gen. Leonard in his command post hearing him discuss the progress of the campaign and the fine work lone by his 9th armored division. He recalled the capture of the bridge and gave this version:

"That morning I sent out my combat teams toward the river, which was our objective. Late in the afternoon one of my commanders called and said, 'General, we've got that bridge.'

"I said, 'What bridge'?

General Shocked

"He said, 'Why that big Ludendorff railroad bridge. We've got men across and we're holding a bridgehead across the Rhine.'

"And I said, "Gosh, why did you do that? Now we'll all get in trouble."

One will always like the general for that story because his was such a normal reaction. But after that first uncertainty and when the high command gave the green light to exploit the bridgehead, Leonard's 9th armored division distinguished itself many more times in daring exploits.

WAR'S COST NOW ESTIMATED TO TOP A TRILLION

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—An estimate that the direct cost of World War II. has gone considerably past the trillion dollar mark has been made by the staff of American university here.

Announcing the result of the school's research today, President Paul F. Douglass calculated that the expenditures for war since 1934 amount to more than $500 for every man, woman, and child in the world.

Dr. Douglass said the total, more than $1,030,000,000,000, does not include damage to public and private property, and likewise does not include Chinese expenditures in the 14 year war with Japan.

Total allied expenditures up to the present were estimated at $558,090,000,000, and axis expenditures were calculated at $442,900,000,000. Dr. Douglass said other "floating statistical data" brought the overall total roughly to the announced figure.

U. S. Fighter Bomber Unit Wins Its Second Citation

PARIS, May 30 (AP)—Col. Joseph L. Laughlin's 362d fighter-bomber group has received its second Presidential unit citation for extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy, United States 9th air force headquarters announced today. The group was cited for attacks against German transport, troops and war material in the Moselle-Rhine triangle March 16. The previous citation was awarded for an attack on enemy shipping in Brest harbor last summer.

THE RED REVOLUTION RIDES AGAIN?

"Notes on the Dissolution of the American Communist Party," an article by the secretary of the French Communist party, Jacques Duclos, was reprinted in the communist Daily Worker of New York before a translation of it was available for interested officials in Washington. Attached to the article was a note by Mr. Browder conceding that the Duclos statements demanded "our most respectful attention." Persons familiar with Red tactics can speculate on the full meaning of this incident. If their reasonable conclusions are anywhere near correct something highly significant, possibly bearing on the peace, has happened.

Mr. Browder is accused by the French communist leader of being the protagonist of a faulty conception of the social revolution in general and "in particular of the direction of the special evolution in the United States." Mr. Browder is accused of heresy and deviation. M. Duclos writes like an old bolshevist. He says Mr. Browder has taken it on himself to modify Marxism, to recognize a peace between classes involving the suppression of class warfare, and the establishment of harmony between capital and labor. Mr. Browder in the face of the charges appears as a penitent.

It would seem improbable that Duclos was speaking for himself alone or even for the French Communist party alone. Mr. Browder has able journalistic assassins who would like nothing better than to .oss the Frenchman on their pen points in a fight over deviations, right or left, and over proper Marxist tactics. If Browder felt that he was on ground where Moscow wanted him to stand there would have been no comment that the article should be given most respectful attention. Rather, the air would be filled with screams and war cries.

Since Red Josef got himself into trouble with the apparently late Herr Hitler, his one time companion in arms, there has been nothing said in Moscow of the Red revolution, the liquidation of the classes, and the war against capitalism. Mr. Stalin began looking for salvation where he could find it, which was in the capitalistic countries. He got it. Six weeks after the late Herr Hitler began chasing the Red armies out of Poland and the Ukraine Harry Hopkins was in Moscow, pledging aid and promising immediate delivery of war supplies. The United States had not yet begun shooting. Nevertheless it went to Russia's aid.

Mr. Stalin began to consort politically and socially with representatives of what the soviets recognize as the plutocratic powers. He took everything he could get and said it was too little. Engineers and transport men accomplished miracles in getting stuff to him by way of the Arctic and the Persian gulf. Mr. Browder, in his desire to follow the party line, several times had found himself running after the wrong bus. A lesser devotee might have given up and sat down to catch his breath. But not Earl Browder. Eric Johnston entertained the Mikoyan dinner party in his honor in Moscow by describing the American Communists: "When you take pepper they sneeze."

Stalin, with Hitler's hands at his throat, abolished the comintern, restored the Orthodox church, and made himself up as a big butter and egg man. Browder then was sure it was time to sneeze. He abolished the American Communist party, made it an educational institution, joined the New Deal, gave his votes to the Democratic party, threw the class struggle out of the window, and forgot all about Karl Marx and the dictatorship of the proletariat. He became just another left wing politician hardly distinguishable from Sidney Hillman. He mingled with the bourgeoisie as just another fellow. He thought that was what Stalin wanted. And at the time it was what Stalin wanted.

Now he sits on the penitent's bench berated with the worst maledictions a Communist can receive. He has betrayed the revolution; he has betrayed Marxism; he had betrayed the class struggle. He is sneezing when he shouldn't. The assumption is that Duclos talks authoritatively with his text furnished by Stalin. Red Josef has what he wanted. He is in Berlin. His capitalist friends put him there. They were willing to continue the fraternization. That soup is cold.

The Reds want some more money, but they do not seem to think it is necessary to behave well in order to get it. Stalin may figure that he has successfully played his allies for suckers and now is the time for the soviet dictatorship to cash in. Who's to stop it? Stalin may believe that everything is ripe for the spread of communism and the success of the Lenin revolution. It is time again for class warfare, class hatreds, the dictatorship of the proletariat, and the advance of the hammer and sickle.

The rebuke to Browder may be one way of saying that the truce is over and the revolution is on again. Browder thinks so or his able journalistic assassins would be chasing M. Duclos thru the faubourgs.

EUROPE IN AMERICA

The century-old controversy between Guatemala and British Honduras was mentioned the other day in the news from the San Francisco conference. The item served once again to draw attention to the fact that the imperial powers in Europe continue to hold colonies in America.

Americans can readily understand why Britain wishes to retain her connection with Canada, with its immense area, its strategic position on the international air routes, and its wealth in natural resources. It is impossible to explain Britain's other holdings in and near the Americas except on strategic grounds. The trade with the Caribbean islands is hardly more than negligible. They are poverty stricken and, in any rational accounting, would be regarded as a liability. The refusal to give them up argues a purpose to use them as bases against America at some future time and thereby places a strain, if generally only a slight one, upon Anglo-American relations.

What has been said of the islands applies in equal or great measure to the colonies on the American mainland. Britain holds British Honduras and British Guiana. The French and the Dutch have also retained both islands and continental holdings. Individually and in the aggregate they are an irritation not only to the United States but to all the Pan-American nations. It is a universal sentiment in the Americas that we can all get along better without the presence in our midst of European colonies. We have not forgotten Europe's efforts to kick over the Monroe Doctrine when we were preoccupied with the Civil war.

The French can hardly claim that their Guiana, for which they can find no better use than as a prison colony is indispensable to their welfare. The Dutch draw extensive profits from Surinam, but like the British and French, they ought to realize that they owe us something for services rendered. Except for the United States, Britain, France, and Holland would all be under German domination today. A voluntary withdrawal by all three nations from Latin America and the Caribbean would constitute a very small sacrifice, indeed, in return for the million American casualties and the couple of hundred billion dollars of war costs contributed by this country to the freeing of Europe from German control and of European colonies across the Pacific from the Japanese.

In gratitude, the Europeans ought to clear out of the Americas and, in addition, they ought to give us a joint tenancy in the half-way houses to Europe: the Azores and Greenland.

WHAT UNEMPLOYMENT?

President Truman on Monday requested congress to provide a broad expansion of unemployment insurance compensation, to be financed with federal funds. He said that existing benefits to the unemployed under the social security laws are inadequate, in that the benefits are too small to prevent cuts in the standard of living, are payable for too short periods of time, and do not apply to federal government employes, workers in small establishments, and several other classifications.

The unemployment benefits vary from state to state, but all of the state plans were approved by the government as being in keeping with the purpose and spirit of the social security law. The differences in benefits were accepted in recognition of the variation in wage rates and living costs over the country. The states are required to deposit their unemployment insurance funds in the United States treasury. Such funds now exceed 7 billion dollars. This is more money than was spent for unemployment relief in the worst four years of the worst depression the country has ever seen.

The states in their unemployment compensation funds were not alone in providing for the rainy day. Wage payments have been vastly expanded during the war, while the supply of consumer goods has been greatly restricted. The result is that wage earners who would be thrown out of work in a depression have accumulated many billions of dollars in war bonds, in savings deposits, in postal savings deposits, and in cash. If a period of desperate unemployment lies ahead of us, we have the money in hand to cope with it for years.

But surely it is clear that hard times are not about to overwhelm us. Unemployment might be properly viewed as a serious early problem if there were great numbers of vacant homes because of a recent period of overbuilding; or if the market for automobiles, electric refrigerators, and other consumers durable goods were saturated as a result of recent overproduction; or if supplies of food and other agricultural products were overhanging the market, threatening to plunge the price level downward; or if people generally had exhausted their cash reserves and were heavily in debt on installment contracts and mortgages. None of these conditions exists. The situation is exactly the reverse in every particular.

The country needs building and production. There is a demand for homes and durable goods of every sort that cannot be filled by maximum production over a long time. Civilians have been starved for the products of American industry. They are out of debt and have billions of cash or cashable bonds to spend. We need locomotives, freight cars, passenger cars, street cars, and rails. The trucking companies say they are prepared to spend 3 billion dollars. There is a vast pent-up market for all the goods American labor can produce.

There will be plenty of jobs if the government will let industry get going on peace time production as rapidly as that can be done without interference with the production of supplies for the Pacific. Give business its head. Don't tell an industry you may reconvert, but you must not make more than 200,000 cars this year, and must not start until the month after next. Don't be afraid to let some people make some money and keep it. The law of supply and demand will keep down prices because advances stimulate output and discourage consumption. If the government will let industry expand, there will be no unemployment for a long time to come. This is no time to think of passing laws increasing the rewards to the idle.

WHEN JAPS WERE QUAINT

Once in a while, as the cities of Japan are being shattered and burned, this column remembers the era when Japanese prints [woodcuts in color] were the rage among pursuers of culture in this country and England. Those who yearn for Picassos, Matisses, Dalis, etc., today would have felt an equal urge toward Japanese prints then, and would have found them much less expensive.

* * *

In the Victorian period the cult for these prints, which deserved their reputation among connoisseurs, trickled down from the higher levels of aestheticism and spread wherever there were pretensions to good taste in art and up-to-date notions about it. Witty Mr. Whistler, who painted his mother under the title, "Arrangement in Silver and Black," said that these prints were the last word in art for art's sake, and everybody believed him. Multitudes owned at least one example, good or bad, and thus proved that they were in the swim.

* * *

The western world's acquaintance with these prints began soon after Commodore Perry's squadron pried open the Japanese oyster. The occident wanted trade and got it in the form of pottery and other decorative ornaments whose fragility was safeguarded in shipment by thrown-away paper, often bearing pictures. In 1856 one of these prints, wrapped around a piece of china, was examined by Felix Bracquemond, a Parisian artist. He immediately became excited, for he had found a print by Hokusai, who has since been ranked among the world's great artists. His enthusiasm spread like wildfire among the art-sakers, and Jimmy Whistler was an early occupant of the bandwagon.

* * *

The rest of the story may be found in "The Aesthetic Adventure," by John Gaunt, a book of the season, and also at the Art Institute of Chicago. One of the finest and largest collections of Japanese prints in the world is housed in the Museum of the Two Bronze Lions. Its slathers of Hiroshiges, Hokusais, Hanurobus, and Utamaros have not been on public exhibition since Pearl Harbor, for preservative reasons, but any accredited visitor may sample them in the filing cabinets.

EUROPEAN WAR MAP

It serves no purpose now, the map of war
We studied all your endless months away;
The colored tacks that marked each corridor
And front in gaudy patterns still portray
The time when spearhead lunges broke the line,
When even pins upon a chart were lost,
And red, and brown, and blue could not define
The surging battlegrounds, the rivers crossed.
But it shall wait until your safe return
To show your path from Africa to France,
To Corsica, then Holland. When we learn
Your troubled journeyings are done, perchance,
At last content, we'll put the map away

A Stroller on Nostalgia Lane

The old theater at the corner of Kinzie and Clark sts., called Jacobs' and the American in the 1880s, was originally the McCormick Music hall, a high class place much like Central Music hall. William W. Coup, a circus manager who had been associated with Barnum, leased the premises, which he remodeled into the Chicago museum, devoted to the exhibition of curiosities.

The lower floor was filled with curios and oddities from the four corners of the earth and the seven seas. Coup's freaks of nature included living specimens; I clearly remember a Mexican midget, female, said to have been the smallest ever known. She was a perfectly formed miniature woman, and well educated.

The top floor of the building contained a small theater, seating a few hundred people, where light operas were given by a stock company. Coup's production of "Erminie," preceding Francis Wilson's Chicago appearance, was his biggest hit. He produced operas that I have never heard of since, such as "Ixion."

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks answers questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents. Replies will be given by mail if stamped envelope is sent. Personal advice may be obtained from The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., or by phone, Superior 0200.]

D. D. asks: "Does the GI bill limit education to veterans under 25 or is one over 25 also entitled to some additional education? Does the education have to be started immediately after discharge or may a veteran wait for some time before deciding what sort of education he desires?"

The law provides that any person who served 90 days or more after Sept. 16, 1940, and was discharged under other than dishonorable conditions or who was discharged before 90 days because of service-incurred disability is eligible for a refresher or retraining course for a period of a year or the equivalent in part time study. The refresher or retraining course may be started not later than two years after discharge or the end of the war, whichever is later. Those under 25 get the year of education plus time in school equal to their time in service.

P. L. M. writes: "I am about to be discharged from service. Because of the new skills I have acquired I do not desire to return to my former job. I have been told I must seek a job requiring these skills thru the veterans' employment representative with the United States employment service. Is this true?"

It is not true. Veterans of World War II. discharged under other than dishonorable conditions are free from all employment controls. They do not need referrals from USES nor statements of availability and they may change jobs at will. Employers may hire World War II. veterans without regard to employment ceilings, but once hired, the veteran must be counted in the ceiling.

THE PANCREAS MAY GO BERSERK

No discussion of the process of digestion would be complete without describing the part played by the accessory organs—the pancreas, the liver, and the gall bladder. These structures are joined to the intestinal canal via certain ducts.

The pancreas, which is six to eight inches long lies below the stomach and extends from the spleen on the left to the duodenum on the right. It is sometimes referred to as the "abdominal salivary gland." When we order sweetbreads in a restaurant we have some idea of what it looks like.

The gland is unusual in that it has a dual function. Insulin, an internal secretion which is absorbed directly into the blood, control the metabolism of sugar. A disturbance in the manufacture of this hormone is responsible for diabetes.

The external secretion—pancreatic juice—is discharged into the first portion of the bowel thru a channel leading to the duodenum. This substance contains ferments which "condition" the various foodstuffs awaiting conversion in the small intestine. For example, amylopsin breaks down starches; trypsin works on proteins; and steapsin splits fats. Of these operations, the most important is fat digestion. In the presence of large, greasy stools—particularly if numerous bits of meat fibers are noted—the possibility of pancreatic indigestion must not be overlooked. As we can understand, should any dissolving fluid be deficient, our nutriment will not be prepared properly for assimilation.

In any acute, violent abdominal pain the examining physician has many diseases to choose from. He may think of gallstone colic, trouble within the liver, ruptured peptic ulcer, or appendicitis. Occasionally, inflammation of the pancreas is the culprit. The onset is abrupt and the patient encounters sharp, stabbing distress in "the pit of the stomach." Later the entire abdominal area may be involved. Nausea, the vomiting of bile-stained material, constipation, and collapse are the usual accompaniments.

A study of the blood will show an elevation of the leucocyte count. Another aid consists in checking the vital fluid for the existence of ferments. One test determines the amount of diastase [which reduces starches] and another, the quantity of lipase [which transforms fats]. If the percentage of either is high we will have a fair concept of what goes on within the pancreas.

Should abscess, hemorrhage, or necrosis [gangrene] be the starter, an exploratory operation may be necessary to confirm the diagnosis. These are the serious aspects of the disorder. But there are probably many more cases of mild catarrhal irritation of the structure than we realize. In this type of indigestion, starvation for a day or two will give the area a rest. Thereafter, the diet may be low in fats, with a moderate amount of proteins. The sufferer can depend largely on carbohydrates for his nourishment.

We do not understand the cause of this condition. Germ-laden bile may have entered the main duct or obstruction may have occurred in some other fashion. At any rate, we can aid prevention by refusing to place too heavy a burden on all our intestinal organs. This means the avoidance of overeating.

A Word on Bonds

Every man has his personal reasons for buying war bonds. With one it may be his son or brother fighting, missing, or killed in action. With another it might be a hedge against inflation. With a third it might be—his part in a war he cannot otherwise fight.

We thought, however, you might be interested in some of the reasons brought back from Europe and the Pacific by Robert Cromie, Tribune war correspondent. He gave them the other day at a bond rally at State and Madison sts. sponsored by THE TRIBUNE. With his permission part of his speech is reprinted here:

"Once, a year or so back, there was an amphibian engineer in New Guinea, a young lieutenant, who volunteered to take medical supplies by small boat in daylight to the spot where a new landing had just been made. Many wounded were waiting there in desperate need of plasma and other medical aids. Jap planes strafed the small boat, and altho the young lieutenant had five slugs in his stomach, he refused to turn back for help. He took the supplies thru, and in saving other men lost his life.

"I think you might like to buy a bond or so for him.

"Then there was a young flyer in England who had completed his required number of missions and was told he could return to the United States. He smiled and shook his head.

"'I am a Jew,' he said. 'I must keep on fighting.'

"He was killed a few flights later.

"I think you might buy a bond or so in his memory.

"There was another flyer I remember. He was a navigator on a B-17 [Flying Fortress] which was jumped by 17 Jap fighters over Buka passage near Rabaul some hundreds of miles from home base. Early in the attack an explosive shell ripped into the navigator's compartment and blew him onto the catwalk. He was badly injured, and the concussion half blinded him, but he crawled back to his guns and kept up the unequal battle. A number of Jap fighters were finally shot down, and the gallant Fortress loaded with dead and wounded limped slowly back to her base.

"Not until the last enemy plane was driven off did the wounded navigator fall dead across his guns.

"Maybe he is worth buying a bond for.

"And there was the Negro tank crew in Europe. An incredulous German captain, taken prisoner after the battle, told of their heroism. He had seen their tank blasted by a direct hit, but three survivors had scrambled out, carbines in hand, and continued firing from beneath the disabled tank. The German man said that never on the western front had he seen such bravery.

"They should be worth a bond or two.

"Not all the heroes are American, of course, and not all are soldiers. There were others who gave their lives—the Poles, Czechs, Russians, French, British, and even a few Germans. I saw some of them in concentration camps like Buchenwald and Ohrdruc. Some were still living, but certain to die. Others were dead but not yet burned or buried, their match-stick corpses piled obscenely together outside the crematorium or in a wooden shed with quicklime sprinkled on them.

"They never had a chance to buy a bond. They weren't lucky enough to live in America, but I am sure you wouldn't say they did not do their share. Maybe you would buy a bond for them and for others like them who now are only ashes on the winds of Europe.

"Then there was the reason for bond buying that I saw at an air field in England. A pint sized bomber pilot walked past me, and in bold white letters on the back of his jacket were the words: 'Buy bonds! Help Texas win the war!'"

RED TAPE ON WORK PERMITS

Chicago, May 25—Talking about juvenile delinquency, I think I know what is causing it. When I was a girl, 15 years of age, I went to work after school and Saturdays and made a few dollars to buy the things I wanted. Nowadays, the kids can't go to work until they're 17 without a working permit—and to get this—boy, o, boy!—the red tape you have to go thru. First of all you have to go downtown and get a social security number for the child, then you have to get a permission slip from the school he or she attends. Then you have to get a job for her [or him], and then the employer has to write a letter saying that he will employ her. After that the parent has to write a letter giving permission and then you go downtown and sit in line for about three hours for a working permit.

I say—let the kids lay around the house and the streets and let them bum around—then you'll have bigger and better juvenile delinquency. But under no consideration let them go to work—not even a few hours a day—not until they're old enough to get married.

This letter may sound as tho I want my child to work. I don't want her to work. I would much prefer to have her stay at home, but she wants to get a job, and not because she needs the money either. She gets $5 a week allowance. Why not let children who really want to do something during the summer vacation go to work. It certainly won't hurt them and it will keep them out of mischief.

A DISGUSTED MOTHER

FOR A CHINESE ARMY

Pasadena, Cal., May 20—Your editorial of May 16 points the way to defeating Japan without sending any more ground troops to the Pacific area. The large amount of military equipment captured in Germany can be sent to China, thus providing an army of millions of men who are ready, able, and eager to fight.

What is the use of sending seven millions of our men when there is already available more men in China than are needed to defeat Japan? All that the United States will get out of defeating Japan is to recover for China, Great Britain, France, and the Dutch, the territory now occupied by Japan. Japan can be defeated in six months by the use of Chinese troops as ground troops, aided by our air forces, without sending a single American boy to fight on the ground.

WHICH?

Chicago, May 25—First it's a dog, then it's a crooner who takes priority over the vets in air line travel. Thru the process of elimination we can set the vet's status, but if it should come to a showdown in the future between the dog and the crooner we wonder who would most likely get the nod to ride?

BUYING BUILDINGS FOR THE NAVY

Chicago, May 25—Now the navy is going to "save" more money by "investing" over $4,000,000 to provide barracks for the enlisted men in Chicago. With the closing of the V-7 program at Northwestern university, sale of the building is very logical—for the owner, at the taxpayers' expense.

The $91.50 monthly subsistence, based on a national average cost of living, is insufficient in Chicago, but permits married couples to maintain a frugal household. That is all most servicemen ask. Barracks will mean breaking up these homes, many with children, because living on base pay only is impossible. As to the expected savings, no governmental unit has ever operated as cheaply as individuals.

At the same time, the navy—which has suddenly awakened to the "plight" of its male personnel, is now allowing WAVES to move from their palatial "barracks" to the same subsistence they find so objectionable for men.

The "honeymooners"—as one Chicago newspaper so caustically referred to men on subsistence—are merely trying to salvage what little normal life they can while in service.

FOREIGNERS GET PASSAGE FIRST

Chicago, May 24—How perfectly lovely: A ship brings 110 GI wives home! I guess I won't be the only one to make a complaint on this piece of news. There aren't enough boats to bring our own boys home, but they can find room for foreigners. The husbands of these wives are the ones that should be made to stay over there where they found their wives and police the country, not the husbands with American wives waiting patiently here for them to return.

DATA ON FORGE WORK ASKED IN DODGE STRIKE

The automotive panel of the war labor board has ordered all statistical data relating to forge operations in war plants in this area rushed to Detroit, Mich., tonight. The panel is studying a union appeal for reconsideration of a decision denying a wage increase to drop forgers in the Dodge Chicago plant of the Chrysler corporation. A strike of 574 of the drop forgers was started Monday and threatens seriously to curtail production of B-29 Super Fortress engines. It is the 178th war work stoppage in the plant since May 2, 1944.

A. J. Eberhardy, international representative of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers, and Helpers' union [AFL], to whom the board's order was directed, said he had asked the board to rule on all wage points which the board had deferred pending a department of labor survey.

Members of his craft, he said, are the only workers in the industry for whom no stabilized rates have been established. He said the labor department survey now under way will not be completed for several months. His members voted to strike, he said, when the company refused a compromise offer which would give local workers wages comparable with those paid in the company's Detroit plants.

Illinois Boy Kills Jap, then Has a Really Big Day

OKINAWA [Delayed] — (AP) — The 22d of April was no ordinary day for Marine Corp. William J. Felix, Hoopeston, Ill. It was his 22d birthday and the 22d day of the Okinawa campaign. He had been in the marines 22 months and came across in the 22d replacement battalion. He had a birthday cake, four layers of flapjacks iced with blackberry jam and decorated with a huge candle. A few days earlier he had met a Jap in a ravine and shot him dead—not with a .22.

A NAVY NURSE TELLS OF BLOOD, MUD AND GLORY

Returns Home After 2 Years at Sea

Lt. [j. g.] Jean Condon, 1800 S. Leamington av., is a pretty, freckled face navy nurse home on leave. She is proud of the freckles. They are her decorations of war, pinned on by the fierce sun in the bomb ceilinged sky of the Pacific.

For the last two years, her home has been a hospital ship which took the wounded from the bloody beaches of Saipan, Pelellu, Angaur, Guam, the Philippines and Iwo. Her experiences, sickening and even terrifying, have only convinced her that "the American fighting man is the bravest in the world."

Muddy and Bloody

"From the first time when as a new crew on a new ship we took the casualties off the beaches of Saipan, I have respected the American fighting man as a brave soldier and a braver patient," she said yesterday. "Saipan was terrible. For three days and three nights we worked constantly while dirty, muddy, and bloody boys poured on the ship.

Altho never bombed, the hospital ship took its wounded off the beaches under fire and frequently was investigated by Japanese bombers overhead, Lt. Condon explained.

Boys Were Wonderful

"We paid no attention because we were too busy," she continued. "We had thought Saipan was bad but Iwo almost got us, even tho we were a hardened crew by that time. But the boys were wonderful. They never whimpered or grumbled and were grateful even for a glass of water.

"One boy typified their attitude. With his head split open, there was no hope for him, but the doctors gave him their best attention. When he came back from surgery, he had a new light in his eyes altho his entire right side was paralyzed because brain tissue had been destroyed. He recovered."

MICHIGAN BUILDS 263½ MILLIONS IN NAVAL CRAFT

New 30 Ship Contract Is Awarded Defoe Yards

BY CHARLES CHEADLE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Bay City, Mich., May 30 — The navy today announced the award of a contract for the construction of 30 180-foot mine sweepers, to be built by the 40 year old Defoe Shipbuilding company of Bay City, which already has produced 175 million dollars worth of ships for the navy since Pearl Harbor.

Capt. E. L. Patch, navy supervisor of shipbuilding for this area, said the company's excellent production record as well as its low bid were factors in awarding the entire contract, calling for about 10 million dollars in construction, to Defoe.

The Defoe yards have turned out 151 ships, nearly all by the upside down process of welding by which the entire hull is built bottom side up on huge cradles, then rolled over and launched. The system permits all welding to be done at levels below welders' eyes, and, officials say, insures the most perfect job possible.

About 2,000 Workers

Four thousand workers were punching time clocks here a year ago, but the number has dropped by almost one-half as the seven building programs undertaken by the yards have been completed. Only a half dozen ships on present contracts remain to be completed.

All told, contracts totaling 263½ million dollars have been completed by seven shipbuilding firms in eastern and northern Michigan. Nearly all of the craft, like those from the Wisconsin-Minnesota area, have gone down the lakes to Chicago, thence to the Gulf by the Illinois and Mississippi rivers.

All Defoe built ships, including the big 307 foot destroyer escorts, have gone down the waterway. Inland shipbuilders here and at Manitowoc, Wis., are reported to be planning to petition the navy to maintain its bridge tenders on the Illinois waterway or in some other way to make the route permanently navigable by ships too long to be passed thru the 220 foot locks of the Welland canal.

Remarkable War Record

Here is Defoe's war record of building:

Twenty-eight DE's and APD's [destroyer escorts and patrol craft] each with a 307 foot hull.

Four BAT'S, 143 foot diesel electric tugs sent to the British on lend-lease.

Chris-Craft Big Contractor

The last APD's are being finished up, and work on the AM's will be started within 60 days, Defoe said.

Second biggest contractor in this area is the Chris-Craft corporation, with yards in Algonac, Holland, and Cadillac, Mich. The company by summer will have completed 10,000 LCVP's, LCPR's, and LCPL's. These are 36 foot landing craft for vehicles, personnel, and miscellaneous invasion equipment, turned out in wholesale quantities, and are carried by the larger ships on amphibious invasions.

The company was given a 60 million dollar contract to build the boats, and another for 24 millions for spare parts, including extra engines. The boats undergo the most grueling tasks of all on an invasion.

The Fisher Boat works at Detroit and the American Cruiser company in Trenton, Mich., have built 19 and five SC's, respectively, at a combined cost of $3,500,000. The SC is a 110 ft. wooden hulled patrol craft.

76 Miles of Combat Boats

Gar Wood, Inc., at Marysville, Mich., has turned out 50 36 foot picket boats and as many 24 foot plane personnel boats, the latter used as water taxis in sheltered harbors. The Eddy Shipbuilding company of Bay City and the Foster Boat company of Charlevoix, Mich., together built 170 of the latter craft.

With the huge Chris-Craft output, this area has sent 76 miles of combat boats and ships to war, a feat unequaled by any other area in the country. To the 263 million dollars in contracts placed by the navy among these plants must be added 150 millions more in navy furnished engines, parts, facilities, and equipment. Together they account for nearly one-fifth of the dollar volume of navy ships built in the Great Lakes-Upper Mississippi region.

JAIL MICHIGAN FARM HANDS AS MEXICAN ALIENS

Ionia, Mich., May 30 [Special]—Accused of being aliens who had gained illegal entry into this country, 25 Mexican field hands were jailed here today after being rounded up by Chester W. Graff, an agent of the Flint office of the bureau of immigration.

Sixteen of them were taken from an onion farm near Saranac owned by Lincoln Rush, an Ionia alderman, and nine from the truck farm of Lee Lampkin of Ionia. Four of them said they were born in Texas, but the others admitted slipping past the Texas border patrol, Graff said.

United Presbyterians Elect New Moderator

Monmouth, Ill., May 30 (AP)—The 87th general assembly of the United Presbyterian church of North America tonight elected Dr. James M. Ferguson, Bellevue, Pa., as moderator. He succeeded Dr. James Harper Grier, president of Monmouth college, in the post.

"Now don't you pay any attention to that fussy man. That shirt will look just dandy when he gets his coat and tie on."

OCD'S TIN HATS CAN BE KEPT AS FLOWER POTS

Mayor Kelly yesterday returned from Washington, D. C., where he conferred with President Truman and Mayor La Guardia of New York and announced that Chicagoans probably will be permitted to keep their office of civilian defense helmets for souvenirs or flower pots. The OCD was ordered terminated by President Truman as of June 30, but Kelly has decreed that the local OCD as an organization is not affected by the order.

He said yesterday that the million dollars worth of OCD equipment held or distributed in Chicago would be surveyed by an agency designated by the President for the purpose of salvaging at least a part of the home defense paraphernalia. The helmets, however, probably will not be reclaimed from the racks where they now hang in OCD members' homes.

The city is eager to return the fire pumps, hose, medicines, gas masks, and other equipment to the government because of the $25,000 it must spend each year for maintenance and watchman service over the stored equipment.

FLYER IS KILLED ON WAY HOME TO WISCONSIN FIELD

McMinnville, Tenn., May 30 (AP)—One of two victims of an army training plane crash near here yesterday were identified today by the Smyrna, Tenn., army air field public relations office. The body of Cpl. Richard G. White, husband of Mrs. Patricia F. White of Madison, Wis., was discovered soon after the crash.

The plane, an AT-11, was en route from Boca Raton, Fla., army air field to Madison, Wis., when it crashed into a wooded hill section during an electrical storm.

Four Killed in Mountains

Reno, Nev., May 30 (AP)—Four members of the crew of an army air technical service command B-25 bomber were killed when the plane crashed during the night near Crystal Peak in the Sierra Nevada mountains between Truckee, Cal., and the Nevada-California border, Reno army air base authorities reported. The craft was en route from its base in Indiana to Salinas, Cal.

SCANTILY CLAD CHAP CONTENDS TRIP NECESSARY

Wearing only pajamas and shoes, Joseph Le Joy, 7, boarded a north bound street car at Paulina and Harrison sts. at 11 o'clock last night and informed Conductor Chester Lenz that he was going home.

"I've just left the hospital," he confided. He had. Police learned he had climbed down the outer walls of County hospital from a second floor ward.

Conductor Lenz turned Joseph over to Shakespeare av. police, who in turn took him home to his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Graham at 1540 Fullerton av. Joseph's reason for leaving the hospital was simple. He was to have his tonsils removed today and he didn't want his tonsils out. His mother understandingly said she'd defer the operation.

ASKS U. S. SCRAP ALL 'UNUSABLE' FIGHTING PLANES

New York, May 30 [Special]—Scrapping by reducing to metal all "unusable, obsolete, and surplus military aircraft equipment"—representing a radical departure from previously considered post-war industrial reconversion plans—has been recommended in a report to the surplus property board, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce revealed today.

In a plea for survival of the industry, H. M. Horner, president of United Aircraft corporation and chairman of the chamber's committee on surplus disposal, pointed out that perhaps 500,000 heavy horse power engines would be in storage after the war with Japan.

Airlines Need Only 1 Pct.

He said 5,000, or 1 per cent, would be sufficient to provide all commercial airline needs for the following five or six years.

The committee said stock piles of obsolete aircraft engines, propellers and instruments would be tremendously large and far in excess of future military needs or foreseeable civilian market demands.

It recommended allocation of adequate quantities of current military aircraft equipment for a strategic reserve and for wide distribution of surpluses to educational institutions. It also called for periodic review of disposal progress to keep storage requirements to a minimum and save the taxpayer the cost of storage.

Plant Disposal Studied

The report was limited to aircraft engines, propellers, and aircraft components, Horner said, but recommendations on disposal of surplus aircraft plants would be submitted to the SPB soon.

Possible foreign trade would not solve the problem of surplus disposal, Horner asserted. That market is limited, he said, and "won't dent the surface." He said that of 34,000 obsolete aircraft declared surplus by the government, only 9,800 have found civilian buyers.

By salvaging metals from unusable aircraft engines, this country can create a strategic reserve in basic metals "which can be set aside and earmarked for war use only," the chamber said.

VET PREFERS 'HANDICAPPED' TO 'CRIPPLED'

The 11th annual conference of veterans employment representatives continued in the Edgewater Beach hotel yesterday. The role of the United States employment service in the rehabilitation of veterans was discussed and several addresses were made by federal officials.

Charles McGonegal, director of the national rehabilitation service of the American Legion, suggested that the American public should use the term "handicapped" rather than "crippled" in referring to disabled war veterans.

McGonegal, who served with the 1st division in World War I and who lost both forearms in battle, demonstrated that he could do anything with his metal arms that a person not so handicapped could do. "Look at the veteran from the chin up," he said. "If he has intelligence and willingness, that's all that matters. He'll be able to handle himself from the chin down."

BILL TO OUTLAW BALM SUITS IN FLORIDA PASSES

Tallahassee, Fla., May 30 (AP)—With but one dissenting vote, the Florida senate today passed and sent to the governor a bill outlawing suits for alienation of affection and breach of contract to marry.

Sen. John R. Beacham of West Palm Beach, who has sponsored similar legislation at previous sessions, said it was directed at "scheming women who come down here and get some old men, basking in the sunshine, in a position where they can sue them."

The lone dissenter, Sen. E. Bert Riddle of Darlington, a Baptist preacher, said he voted against the proposal because he thought some alienation of affections suits were justified and that the courts should decide which actions were brought properly.

Self-Styled Descendant of King George IV. Dies

RUISLIP, England, May 30 (AP)—Death of William Matthew O'Leary, 49, who claimed to be a great-great-grandson of King George IV. and Mrs. Maria Anne Fitzherbert, was announced today. The British Press association said that the king, when prince of Wales, went thru a marriage ceremony with Mrs. Fitzherbert in 1785, but that royal approval was not given to the marriage and the king later married Princess Caroline. O'Leary was claimant to the Fitzherbert estate, valued at more than $1,000,000.

BREAK PICKET LINES: TOBIN TO TEAMSTERS

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—Daniel J. Tobin, head of the AFL Teamsters union which mans a big percentage of the nation's supply lines, today urged his members to disregard picket lines unless otherwise directed by the international.

Tobin, writing in the June issue of The International Teamster, said that "most of those fellows who refused to go thru picket lines are yellow."

"We will not shirk the responsibility of telling our members to obey the constitution, which is against sympathetic strikes," Tobin told his membership of 630,000.

The teamster boss' editorial was timed with a strike in Chicago of an independent chauffeurs' and truck drivers union in which the AFL teamsters took no part. A few members of Tobin's union were reported to have refused to cross picket lines thrown up by the independent union.

Tobin referred to the necessity for continuing transportation of enormous quantities of war material and said it was necessary for the teamsters to continue observing their no-strike pledge.

DEATH NOTICES

In Memoriam

EHLERS—Charles L. Ehlers. In loving memory of our husband and father, who passed away four years ago today.
There is a home, not made with hands;
And beyond its golden door
Awaits the one we love so dear,
Not lost, but gone before.
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

FLODBERG—Axel L. Flodberg. In fond and loving memory of our dear husband, daddy, and brother, who left us one year ago today.

The years may wipe out many things
But this they wipe out never—
The memory of those happy days
LOVING WIFE AND DAUGHTER, SISTER, AND BROTHER.

CITY OWNERSHIP OF TRANSIT LINE AN OLD ISSUE

Recall Three Attempts That Failed

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK

Public ownership of the Chicago traction system is not a new thought. Three times—in 1904, 1925, and 1930—municipal ownership was submitted to referendums and twice the people approved it, in 1904 and in 1930. In both instances legal and financial developments prevented carrying thru the plans.

Another referendum is to be held next Monday on a public ownership plan, this one sponsored by Mayor Kelly and Gov. Green. This plan calls for the establishment of a Chicago Metropolitan Transit authority to purchase the elevated and surface lines and to consolidate and operate them as a single unit. An 87 million dollar offer for the properties is to be made in the expectation that the money can be borrowed on bonds secured only by earnings.

1904 Scheme Failed

The 1904 scheme was pushed by Mayor Edward F. Dunne and the city vote in favor of it was large. It fell thru when the Illinois Supreme court held that the proposed bond issue of 75 million dollars for the purchase was illegal.

Private enterprise was then given its chance and in 1907 the city granted a franchise that made possible the spending of 100 million dollars for improvements. For 20 years afterward the service of the street car company was regarded as satisfactory. Its earnings were adequate to cover all obligations.

The 1925 plan for municipal ownership was defeated by a majority of more than 100,000. Again, under that plan, funds for the purchase were to be borrowed. The price then was in excess of 247 million dollars—162 millions for the surface lines and 85 millions for the elevated.

Form of Sale Made

In 1927 the surface lines were put into receivership and the doldrums began. In 1930 there was another referendum on elevated and surface lines unification with a dash of municipal subway building. The vote favored the proposals but the scheme lost out because money was not available for financing in the depression years.

The 1927 plan, which was fostered by Samuel Insull, set a value of 260 millions for the two traction companies. The city franchise ordinance implementing it was kept alive until 1934. In 1936 a form of sale of the surface lines to creditors was made in the federal District court.

An attempt to get the surface lines a franchise failed again. The insistence of the city on unification was responsible for holding up the sale, which has never been abrogated; it is still on the court record, awaiting final court approval.

New Attempt Made

A new consolidation attempt was made later. The city drew a new ordinance in 1941. The elevated lines [in bankruptcy since 1932] and surface lines security holders then agreed on a financial setup with 80 millions of bonded debt and stocks of about 100 millions.

The Illinois commerce commission, after a long series of hearings, refused to allow the issuance of the securities. The court condemned the whole plan as financially unsound and unlikely to bring riders any adequate improvement.

Trustees Have a Plan

Judge Michael L. Igoe of the federal District court, which controls the elevated and street car companies in bankruptcy, has insisted that the city keep alive the 1941 ordinance at least until it has been proved the public ownership plan will work.

The trustees of the surface lines are sponsoring another plan, which is a revamping of the one turned down by the commerce commission. This scheme is based on the 1941 ordinance.

The city's stand is that the old unification case is dead and that it wants only the public ownership scheme. The city, so far, has shown deference to the court's wishes. The 1941 ordinance is to expire June 11 unless extended by the city council.

[Another article on the traction problem will be printed soon.]

Woman Reports Robbery and Attempted Attack

A former dice girl, 27, reported to police yesterday that a motorist who offered to take her home from a Madison st. tavern robbed her of a wrist watch, a ring, and a coat, and attempted to rape her. She said she jumped out of his automobile, smashed the windshield with a brick, then fled to a restaurant and called the police.

Nolan Marks and his wounded bride, Ann, 18, sort letters containing money gifts sent them after she was shot as they were robbed.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 30 (AP)—Misfortune has paid off at 4 to 1 for Sailor Nolan Truman Marks, 19, and his wounded bride, Ann Marks, 18.

Last week a holdup man robbed them of $100 they had saved for a honeymoon and shot Mrs. Marks in the thigh. Today she is recovering and well wishers across the land have sent the couple $403.10. And the checks are still coming in.

The six times wounded sailor had mused, after the holdup and shooting, "To think that I sweated for two years—for this."

But today both he and his attractive, bedridden wife were able to smile as they sorted the letters that have come to their tiny, modest apartment at the rear of a grocery.

The couple won't get their honeymoon trip, however. Marks is due back in New York June 15, and his bride's leg won't be healed by then.

EVEN LESS MEAT SEEN FOR JUNE; PORK POINTS UP

The meat shortage will become even more acute next month, the office of price administration announced in Washington, D. C., last night, as point requirements for some pork cuts were raised from one to three points effective Sunday.

Administrator Bowles predicted an average of 201,010,000 pounds of meat weekly in June, which represents a 7 per cent decrease from May. He predicted there would be more pork than any other type of meat. He estimated the total supply of lard and of cooking and salad oils would be 20 per cent below May supplies.

Pork fatbacks [clear and regular plates] will be increased to 8 red points Sunday. Bacon [breakfast plate] also will be raised from 5 to 8 points. Pork sides [aged and dry cured] will go up 1 point to 9 points.

No other red point values will be changed except in cheeses, which will decrease 2 points to 6 points for limburger, camembert, liederkranz, and other soft, perishable types.

Weekly estimates for various types of meat were announced as follows:

Pork, 91,240,000 pounds in June as compared with 103,590,000 pounds in May; beef, 73,530,000 pounds, compared with 80,220,000 pounds; veal, 23,040,000, compared with 17,730,000; lamb, 11,010,000, compared with 11,670,000; mutton, 2,190,000, compared with 1,110,000.

BANKS ORDERED TO RECORD USE OF LARGE BILLS

Washington, May 30 (AP)—All financial institutions must keep records beginning June 1 of transactions involving extraordinary amounts of large denomination bills, the United States treasury department announced tonight.

The treasury said any transaction involving bills of $50 denomination or higher, or involving $10,000 or more of United States currency must be reported on special forms to the various federal reserve banks.

Excepted were dealings in large bills which the financial institutions regard as "commensurate with the legitimate and customery conduct of the business, industry or profession of the person or organization concerned." No reason for the regulation was given.

FOOD RATIONING UNTIL 1950 SEEN BY SEN. WAGNER

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—Food rationing until 1950 was forecast today by Sen. Wagner [D., N. Y.].

The chairman of the senate banking committee told reporters that controls on prices and volume of edibles would be necessary until that time.

Wagner's committee yesterday approved legislation continuing the government agency handling those problems — OPA — until June 30, 1946. It rejected, 10 to 5, a proposal by Sen. Taft [R., O.] to terminate controls in six months.

The chairman reasoned that perhaps another year or so would be required to defeat Japan; then, to avoid a disruption of the nation's economy, the government would have to keep a clamp on food controls for another three years or so.

VICTORY in Europe was won only through the combined endeavor of the United Nations. Only through sustained joint effort can the fruits of that victory be reaped.

Without disparaging the truly heroic contributions of others, three of the Allies may fairly be credited with having made the major contributions to victory over the European Axis—the United Kingdom, Russia and the United States. The close accord of these three nations is no less crucial to the accomplishment of the tasks that remain.

First of these is the war against Japan. It still requires winning. Even without any help from others, the United States could make good this victory, but the war's duration will be speeded by the marshaled effort of the United Nations.

Next, and not less important, is the task of establishing a basis for enduring peace. In this struggle our enemies are more formidable than any we have faced—national ambitions, prejudices, suspicions and distrusts, the staggering burden of tradition and debilitating cynicism born of past failure, the cleaving wedges of divergent languages, thought patterns, economic creeds and procedures—an array of difficulties as baffling as fog and as formidable as a deluge. They can be vanquished only by a continuance of the working accord between the United States, Russia and Britain that was forged on the anvil of European conflict.

The ties between Britain and America are too firm to be severed by any foreseeable strain. But that has not been true of our relations with Russia. Even while fighting a war in which our respective ways-of-life were at stake, the inestimable services of each to the other were rendered as friendly but independent associates rather than as fully trusted partners.

The first steps toward establishing confidence lie in a frank recognition of what may contribute to the lack of it and in a definition of what can be done to restore it.

1. Probably the greatest single area of reciprocal distrust between Russia and our own country is based on the fear of each that the other may try to interfere with its domestic, economic and political affairs. Each purports to see the beam of meddlesome intervention in the other's eye, while it ignores the mote in its own. Thus the Soviet Union remembers that we participated in the foreign military intervention at the time of her civil revolution, and afterwards lent our support to successive boycotts of her trade, of her gold, and of her credit needs. For our part, we remember the Soviet Union's doctrine, and aggressive support, of revolutionary international communism.

We feel that Russia should find satisfactory evidence of our present willingness to have her develop her internal institutions as she will in the aid that we have given her during the war, and in the record of our good-neighbor policy as applied to Latin America. She, no doubt, resents our lingering suspicions in the face of her declared policy of 1941 to refrain from any attempt to influence the political or economic structure of foreign nations. Certainly, each of us will need the repeated reassurance that can come only through sustained performance by the other in the years ahead. Meanwhile, much will be gained if each will give to the other's good faith the benefit of the doubt, while it scrupulously guards its own conduct to avoid even the appearance of backsliding.

2. A second zone of suspicion is created by those measures which each of us interprets as natural and necessary bulwarks of national security when they are our own but as evidence of dangerously aggressive imperialism when taken by the other. In our view, at least, such demands as we have voiced for island trusteeships or for other naval bases appear mildly conservative as compared with Soviet claims for annexation of territory and for a general orbit of influence, under governments friendly to her, throughout eastern Europe in particular.

There can be no easy solution to that problem. Bi-focal vision, by which one nation can look through a second lens ground to the prescription of another, seldom is achieved in international affairs. The success of the San Francisco Conference will provide a mechanism for international definition of principles and procedures which at least might relieve the inevitable strains. Most important will be the record of how each of us proceeds in our respective courses of action. Soviet performance thus far is highly unsatisfactory to us. While we have taken pains to clear our procedure with her, she has taken action in the Baltic, in Austria and in Poland without even advance notice to us.

3. A third testing ground for the future of American-Soviet relationships will be defined by the course of Russia in our continuing war with Japan. We are not unmindful of the toll paid by the Soviet Union in its magnificent European war effort. But we still are locked in a desperate struggle with an enemy that exemplifies the Fascism which America and Russia equally denounce. And that war is being fought in an area where Russian interests are importantly at stake.

Russia has an extraordinary opportunity to create good will by throwing her weight speedily and effectively on our side. There is no doubt but that the final Pacific settlement will generate problems comparable with those of the European peace, but it is equally certain that the continuation of the European comradeship in arms can do much to promote an enduring and confident postwar friendship.

4. A fourth, and highly important, potential source of suspicion and irritation is the intellectual blockade that the Soviet Union has maintained against the free flow of travel, intercourse, and exchange of ideas. We can understand the genesis of this policy and the reasons for its continuance while Russia entertained a constant fear of attack by powerful enemies. But the sustained perpetuation of such a quarantine by so strong a nation as the present U.S.S.R. could not be accepted as a protective measure. Inevitably it would generate suspicion that it was rather an instrument of nationalistic isolation or even of contemplated aggression. A way-of-living, at arm's length, with a nation that maintains such intellectual quarantines is possible; any whole-hearted partnership of effort is quite impracticable.

5. Trading between a free-enterprise nation and one that operates all foreign commerce as a government monopoly can give rise to many frictions. That subject is too complicated for exposition here. Suffice to say that, while difficult, it is not impossible to conduct such trade with mutual advantage. We are in a position to help Russia greatly with her program of industrial rehabilitation and expansion at great saving of cost in terms of her current scale of living. In return, we must have assurance that her government monopoly trading will be conducted for commercial rather than political ends, and that it will be used to encourage rather than to restrict multilateral and non-discriminatory world trade.

This is a representative list of the major areas in which misunderstanding and distrust may be generated, or allayed, in Russian-American relationships. No doubt, an equally honest list drawn by a citizen of the Soviet Union would be more heavily weighted by those features of our behaviour which irritate and stimulate distrust on their side. If such a catalog were to be presented, it should receive our most searching and responsible consideration.

For it is of utmost importance that our two nations, in concert with the other United Nations, learn how to get along in mutual confidence and respect. Our understanding of each other now is so imperfect that our negotiations are punctuated with continuous irritations over little issues. This, inevitably, will continue until such matters are submerged in the general confidence that can be achieved only through satisfactory settlement of the big issues. We must succeed in this, or the defeat of Japan will merely mark the end of the Second in a series of World Wars.

"SALTY O'ROURKE"

By Mae Tinée

Like the gee-gees?

I'll put two on the nose that "Salty O'Rourke" will be a winner with you. [I will now stop pretending I know anything about horses, and get back where I belong, in the critic's field.] This film has dialog to match the title—salty is perhaps a bit mild for it—but it has some of the funniest and fastest chatter I've heard in a long time, and I got a number of good laughs out of it.

Altho the title refers to Alan Ladd, to my mind it is young Stanley Clements who really makes the picture. The entire cast is excellent and Mr. Ladd gives his usual smooth and likable performance, but it's gaunt, skinny little Stanley who gives the picture its punch. As a tough, undersized little jockey from Brooklyn, he can ride any pig or beetle—two new words I learned yesterday—even tho he has been barred from the tracks. He's tough, fresh, and in spite of that, pathetic, as are most kids who grow up and get into the fast pitching too soon.

Salty, a gambler, owes money to a crooked bookie who insists on collecting or else, and he decides that with a little fixing he can get the kid back on the tracks and riding a horse that could be a winner with the right jockey. He plans to use the kid for his own purpose, but before he knows it, young Johnny is running things, and the older, smoother man has to play his way or lose his chances to pay off the gangster on his trail.

A pretty, but very old-fashioned, young school teacher [how she stayed that way with jockeys for pupils, I'll never know] enters the picture, and Salty, who regards her as "strictly a hay-shaker" plans to use her to bring his tough young charge into line, but before he knows it the tables are turned on him again.

It seemed a little incongruous for two such hard-boiled men to go for so much sweetness and light, and the only time the film seems to lose pace is when love comes along, but then, we gotta have love, don't we?

Milton Holmes did a fine job on the original story and screen play, Raoul Walsh kept things moving with smart direction, and so—"Salty O'Rourke" is a nice little ride for anybody's money.

Girl Bemoans Etiquet Lack in Some Boys

BY SHEILA DALY

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

In these days when dates are few and far between and a good boy is hard to find, it's a rare thing for a gal to complain when a fellow does ask her to split a Saturday night of fun. But here is a letter from a girl who thinks it might improve boy-gal relations if a few of the Joes would skim over the etiquet book before setting out for a bright lights evening:

"I wish boys wouldn't think 'manners' are old fashioned. No girl can have real respect for a boy who cannot show his respect for her by observing small courtesies. Older persons have a right to wonder 'what this generation is coming to.'

"On the bus one day last week I saw an older man rise to let an older woman have his seat. Before she could sit down a rowdy high school boy pushed into the seat. And he kept it, too. Boys may complain about girls being 'khaki wacki' or having 'the navy blues,' but fellows seem to learn manners in the service. They act as if they appreciate a girl and treat her as if they enjoy being with her, not as if they were doing her a favor by taking her out.

"Many of my friends agree that we would rather stay home and 'tend to our knitting' than be treated condescendingly. We feel that the boys' actions are the result of the undue attention paid them because of the man power shortage. Instead of reacting this way, I think they should do their best to preserve etiquet as a part of the American way of life."

A gal has no way to combat a rude boy except by refusing to go out with him and, after all, Saturday night is the loneliest night in the week, so when a few girls lowered standards, politeness hit a new low for every one. "Consideration and mutual respect" are part of the basic law of human relations. Sometimes fellows find that out in kindergarten; sometimes they go about stepping on toes and slamming doors right up to their 18th birthday. But when they do get the pitch on what makes a smooth boy, it's a smooth girl they'll be looking for. So mind your "please" and "thank you's." For a good man, you can wait, can't you?

'Midsummer Nightmare'

By Christopher Hale

[Copyright: 1945: By Mrs. Frances Stephens]

INSTALMENT XXXIV.
ENGINE DESIGN SAFE

"What's this?" Miss Warburton almost stumbled over a black snakelike hoop in the grass. The senator held her up.

"The hose. They've got all the garden hose in the place joined together. There's no outdoor faucet at the workshop. Water has to come from the house. It's to be hoped the electric pump won't break down. Altho it isn't doing much good."

"Why doesn't some one call the fire department?" she stopped short.

"They have, they have. They've thought of everything. Kimball's been on the phone ever since they discovered it, trying to get help. It seems the regular driver of the township fire engine was in a car accident a few days ago and the caretaker at the engine house couldn't remember who'd been appointed in his place. I understand these drivers are farmers who are paid only for the specific hours they put in at the fires."

Two people came from the fire.

"Some sight, isn't it!" Kim panted. "Poor old Gerrit."

Winnie burst out, "I've been trying to get him to call Grand Rapids. There'd surely be time to get a fire engine out here before this dinky little township thing comes."

Kim sighed. "Will some kind soul beat it into her head that fire protection stops at the city limits?"

"You mean, they'd just let this place burn down because it was outside?" Winnie's voice shook.

"This is seven miles out of town. It isn't as if it were just over the border, dear," Miss Warburton slid an arm around her. "Don't take it so hard. The engine plans are safe and the place is insured. It's too far away from the other buildings to endanger them, with no wind at all."

Winnie nodded. "If only Kim wouldn't be an idiot. Look at his left hand. It's horribly burned." She indicated a fat white mitten Kim was wearing.

He gestured, impatiently.

"It's nothing. You should see poor old Sybrand. Both his hands are badly burned. He's been in a dither for fear Gerrit would blame him for not waking him up so he could rescue things, so I helped him break a window over Gerrit's workbench. We knocked out all the glass and both reached in and pulled out a row of Gerrit's notebooks on the counter under the window. All of a sudden something exploded. Can of oil or paint, I suppose."

Miss Warburton made a sympathetic grimace. "Have you sent for a doctor?"

Kim waggled his hand in front of her. It was most professionally bound up. "Didn't have to. Doctor came along with the crowd. He'd been out on a night call, stopped to see the show. He wanted to take us up to the house but Mr. Jennesma wouldn't spare the time so he had to do it by flashlight. But he did a good job, at that."

"O, boy!" Winnie squealed. "There goes the roof!"

A great flaming section sagged lower and lower while every one held his breath. Then it cracked and dropped.

"If it had to do this," Winnie said, "I'm glad I didn't miss it."

"Look at all the timber in that building!" Sen. North cried. "A criminal waste! A barn."

"You wouldn't have thought so in 1854. They say this was all magnificent forest, then."

Sybrand Jennesma came hurrying out of the dark, shouting hoarsely for Kim. His white shirt was torn and scorched in two places.

Miss Warburton touched his arm to get his distracted attention. "Were you badly hurt, Mr. Jen.?"

Jerking away, he roared, "Don't stop me. Terrible hurry. O there you are, Kimball." Taking one step toward Kim he stopped, then deliberately came back. His voice shook. "I . . . I'm sorry, Miss Warburton. I didn't mean to speak to you like that. I . . . I'm . . . so . . . so . . . well I hardly know what I'm doing."

"Please don't think of it for another second. I know how you must feel. Couldn't you sit down and rest . . . just for a short while?"

He shook his head, dazedly.

"Coffee," said Winnie. "That's what he needs. I'll go up to the house and make some."

Sybrand nodded exhaustedly. "Yes. Get the cook up. Maybe it would clear my head a little."

"Do your hands hurt much?" Miss Warburton asked again. She led him over to a low brick wall.

They sat down in a row.

"I've done everything . . . everything I can think of," Sybrand whispered. "O, why doesn't the fire engine come? My poor brother. I hate to think of his waking up and finding what has happened."

Miss Warburton, watching his face with the deepest sympathy, thought, why he is afraid! Afraid of Gerrit, not for him.

"What have we done that all these troubles should happen to us?" he muttered over and over with variations.

Nobody tried to answer. Now and then he admitted his hands hurt rather badly.

Winnie came back miraculously soon with a basket over one arm and a heavy pot of coffee in the other hand. Kim went to meet her. Winnie explained that the cook had anticipated the order and the coffee was ready when she reached the kitchen.

She was also the bearer of a message.

"Your wife was in the kitchen, Mr. Jennesma. She wants to know if there was any money in the safe in your brother's workshop. She wants you to come up and tell her how bad the fire is."

Sybrand grunted.

"Hasn't she got legs, and eyes? Let her come out and see for herself. O, I know . . . her asthma's bad. She should see the burns I've got on my hands. Then she'd have something to groan about. Here. Let me take that."

Winnie had been trying to tilt a full coffee cup to his lips. He put up his thick padded hands and managed to hold it between them. But, Miss Warburton reflected, certainly he would have to be fed.

Suddenly, a shrill, banshee wail rose and fell in the distance.

"Here they come," Winnie squealed and dashed off.

Kim cried, "I'll head them off at the gate and turn them into the back drive." And he was gone, too.

Sybrand, dropping his cup, stood up. He glanced at the house and at the fire, muttering his indecision. If that noise awoke Gerrit, he wanted to break the disaster to him first, to soften it with reminders of the insurance and that the precious engine design was safe. Thus Miss Warburton, watching him and knowing him so well, read his thoughts.

Third Knollwood Horse Show to Be Held as Benefit July 1

BY JUDITH CASS

GOOD news for equestrians is contained in the announcement that the third annual Knollwood Horse Show has been set for Sunday, July 1. The program will continue all day long from 10 a. m., with an hour out for luncheon, and again proceeds from the benefit will be divided among several charitable organizations caring for children.

If Mrs. Louis F. Swift wins the President's trophy, contributed two years ago by George Rossetter, for the third successive time this year, she will acquire it permanently for her trophy collection. Some of the others contributing trophies for the show are the Champ Carrys, the Charles Dennehys, and William Roy Carney, who gave the handsome Paul Revere silver bowl won last year by Miss Barbara Bentley as a challenge trophy for junior jumpers.

The same committee that planned last year's show will be in charge this year, including Mrs. Donald Easter as chairman, Mr. Easter, Lucius Teter, Mrs. Philip Reddy, Mrs. Frederick Koch, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Steele, and Edward F. Wilson.

New to the show this year will be a junior committee, headed by Miss Marion Carry as chairman and including her sister, June; Miss Joan Templeton, Miss Jean Carney, Miss Joan Monroe, Miss Jean Scharin, Miss Bentley, and Miss Jean Reddy. Miss Marion Carry, who always is called Nonny, rode this winter with the Monmouth county hunt in New Jersey while attending Sarah Lawrence college, and her younger sister has taken several ribbons at Foxcroft.

James Emmett will serve as the show's ringmaster, and Francis Newcomb will announce the events.

Here and There

Chicagoans who remember the former Sarah Spencer from her debut days here will be interested to hear she and her French husband, Maj. Georges Thenault, have been reunited in Washington, D. C., and soon will go to their summer home in Harwichport, Mass. Washington was the first meeting place of Mme. Thenault and her husband, who commanded the Lafayette Escadrille in the last war. The Thenaults lived in France until shortly before it was invaded by Germany, when Mme. Thenault brought their two children to Washington to live for the duration

The Thenaults will be joined soon at Harwichport by Mrs. George Starkweather Haskell of Evanston and her daughter, Anne, who will visit them for several weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Haskell will go east Monday to attend Anne's graduation June 7 from the Mary C. Wheeler school in Providence, R. I. During their absence the Haskell's younger daughter, Joan, a sophomore at Roycemore, who will enter Miss Wheeler's in the fall, will stay with her grandmother, Mrs. Alfred H. Gross, in Evanston. The Haskells' elder daughter will be a debutante next season.

Also receiving her diploma from Miss Wheeler's on the 7th will be Miss Patricia Selz, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Selz, will go east for the event.

Engagement News

Miss Katherine Wolleson, who all her life has been a navy daughter, soon will be a navy wife. Today Capt. Edwin A. Wolleson, who is in command at Navy pier, and Mrs. Wolleson of Evanston are announcing the engagement of their daughter to Lt. Comdr. Everett B. Williams Jr. of the naval reserve, son of Dr. and Mrs. Williams of Cuyler av. Comdr. Williams was at home recently on a 30 day leave from the Pacific and now has gone to Providence, R. I., to help put into commission a new ship of which he will take command. The wedding will take place in Providence next week, probably June 8.

Miss Wolleson now is in Providence visiting Miss Ruth Lofquist, whose father, Capt. E. A. Lofquist, formerly was chief of staff and aid to the commandant of the 9th naval district, stationed at Great Lakes. Mrs. Wolleson will go east for the wedding and if Capt. Wolleson can get leave at that time he will accompany her.

Miss Wolleson attended the Flintridge school in Pasadena, Cal.; the San Luis school in Colorado Springs, Colo., and the Frances Shimer. Her fiancé was graduated from Northwestern university.

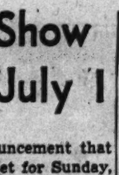
THE QUESTION

What was your most interesting or amusing contest experience?

WHERE ASKED

La Salle hotel. [Asked of persons attending the spring forum of the Chicago Contest club.]

THE ANSWERS



Ann Wiseman, housewife, Homewood—It was a statement contest sponsored by a chewing gum company. Several members of the club had entered and we wondered when the winners were to be announced. I called the company to find out. My name was taken and the company sent me a $5 prize. I hadn't entered the contest.

Mrs. Steve Converse, telephone order clerk, 2117 Sheffield av.—When I first started, I won $1,000 in a contest. At the same time my home burned down. I met some friends for lunch a few days later. One had heard about my luck and was congratulating me. The other knew about the fire and was consoling me.

Mrs. Bruce Robertson, housewife, 913 Maple av., Evanston—I entered a contest for a waffle iron. I had just broken mine. The day the contest ended the sponsors announced on the radio, "There are now 500 happy women in the country who have received waffle irons." I was disappointed, but a month later I received an iron as a winner.

Mrs. R. H. Nelson, housewife, 122 E. 73d st.—This was in 1923 when I was 15. The telephone rang and a voice informed me I had won first prize of $500 in a contest. I replied that it must be a mistake, because I didn't remember entering. It had taken a year to judge the entries and by that time I had forgotten the contest.

Tiny Bodices Add Accent to Dance Dresses

BY REA SEEGER

Unlimited yardage marks the new dance dresses as this summer's best heart breakers. Tiny, fitted bodices that accentuate the smallest of waistlines help also to dramatize the extreme width and swirl of a floor length skirt. Filmy sheers in layers or folds of pastel and white and black materials drift over petticoats or slips of matching taffeta. And what completes the fashion picture of such soul satisfying romantic gowns for the dancing crowd are the ruffles, lace edgings, flounces, ribbons, and flutings that are used for contrast trim.

Bouffant gowns are back in the spotlight. They never really completely disappeared, but this summer you'll find larger and more tempting collections — collections that are unusual because of the exquisite, delicate colors and the many all whites and the very effective white sheers trimmed with black lace. Second to the beauties in all white come those of shell pink, then the gowns of robin's egg blue, daffodil yellow, and the very subtle charmers in dove gray. Most of the skirts are gathered to define a small doll waistline. Some have fitted bodices with featherweight boning to keep the silhouette slim and smoothly fitted.

Black lace in bands is used most effectively in wide skirts and for the contrast of the bodice. Flounces gathered to an already wide and gathered skirt provide extra swirl for dancing. Off-the-shoulder decolletage becomes even more flattering when the shirred ruffles are edged with black lace. Sashes have come back again. Some are tied demurely and simply around and over the dress, each ending in a huge bow at the back; others are inset to the waistline of the gown, with fluttering streamers and bows at the back. Most of the dance dresses are made of net and sheer organdylike materials. The airy drifts of fine net unquestionably are the most picturesque.

Thru the Looking Glass

After a good deal of vacillating, the weather finally seems to be going warm, and we hope you're set for it.

In winter it's the thing to be smart and sophisticated; in summer the height of smartness is to look cool and clean. This is best accomplished by the fine old maneuver of being clean, extra clean—of scrubbing oftener, and wearing clothing that's scrubbable and tubbable, too.

And you can heighten this precious illusion of scrubbed freshness if you are faithful about the little things of grooming, of which by far the most important is your consistent, unfailing use of a good deodorant or anti-perspirant. Without that all is lost. The sheerest fabrics, the loveliest, coolest colors, and the smartest lines in summer dresses won't help a bit if basically there is even an occasional whisper of the dread odor of perspiration about your person.

Then there is the matter of fragrances; they can foster the illusion of freshness wonderfully. Toss oil or salts into your tub, and see to it that they're scented with a fragrance that's a far, far cry from your winter favorite that is heavy and sophisticated. Try something lemoney, or a bright floral fragrance like carnation, or lily of the valley, or a cool, true violet.

Use a powder for your face that is a bit more absorbent than that you use in winter. What's commonly described as a "heavier" powder will be best for most of us in summer, when the oil is apt to ooze all over the nose and chin. Such powder will pick that excess oil up a little better and save you the embarrassment of a shiny, hot looking face.

Use bath powder, too, in summer time. Your clothes will feel at least 50 per cent less sticky if the surface they cover is smoothly filmed.

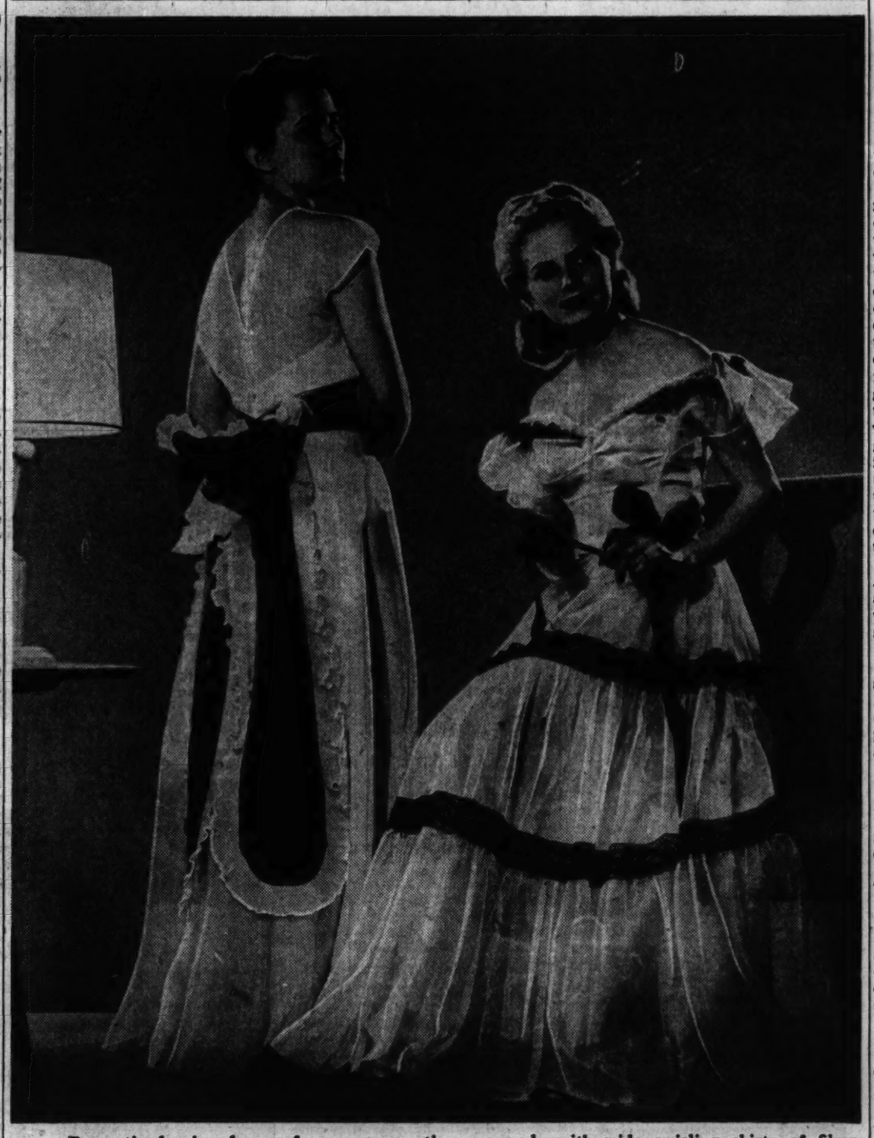
Swirling Skirts of Filmy Sheers for Summer Parties



Romantic dancing dresses for summer parties are made with wide swirling skirts of filmy sheers and with plenty of eye appeal in the ruffles and trim. At left: White sheer over a white taffeta slip with contrasting girdle belt of cerise that ends in a big bow and two long streamers. At right: Picture book dance dress of pale shell pink sheer, trimmed with black lace bands and sashed with black velvet ribbon tied at the side. Available in a Chicago store. [TRIBUNE Studio Photo]

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

Goldfish Bowl

A customer made a purchase in a department store the other morning and later found a slight error in the sales slip. The department head to whom she reported the error claimed it was due to new, inexperienced help.

"This store has been running 50 years," she said, "and for 50 years there's been the same problem: The older, experienced clerks will not help the new ones. There's not a sales person in the section who couldn't have instructed the new girl, but it's like putting an extra goldfish in the bowl—the ones that got there first are hostile."

The statement unhappily is true, especially where there is considerable competition for commissions on sales. Department stores, however, are increasingly on the lookout for employes who are willing to cooperate, who have confidence that there are sales enough to go around, and have sufficient loyalty to know that a satisfied customer is the responsibility of all. For, the more efficient the entire selling force, the more business for the store—and the more profit to the individual. It shouldn't take much of this line of reasoning to do away with the goldfish bowl treatment of the new employe. Anyway, why not give it a try?

Initials

How about an initials contest? There's C. A. A. meaning two different things, "Civil Aeronautics administration" and "Chicago Athletic Association" . . . RCA meaning "Retail Credit association" and "Radio Corporation of America" . . . there's CCH, "Commerce Clearing house" and "Cook County hospital" . . . and CIT, "Commercial Investment Trust" and "California Institute of Technology." Any other initials with different meanings?

USO "Oklahoma!" Next to Penicillin, Says Soldier, As Local Hospitals Ask for More Entertainment

Memorial day brought a letter from Henry F. Tenney, chairman of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross, about a meeting being arranged for next week to make plans to comply with requests from military and naval hospitals in this area to double the schedules of entertainment for wounded service men. It came in the same mail with a Theater Guild report, by way of a former New York newspaper man, writing from Dutch New Guinea, "Wanted you to know that we had 'Oklahoma!' at the general hospital where I'm now a patient and that it probably was the best medication the men have received since penicillin was discovered."

Maybe you would like to hear more of that letter. "There's plenty of good copy in the four day run the U. S. O. cast did here," he writes. "Technically it was as close to New York standards as one could expect. Emotionally it had a lot of overtones: the pajama clad crowd of 7,000 sitting thru a tropical rain to catch every movement; the dancers, slipping, sliding, and falling on the rain swept stage; the guys lying on tilted litters and sitting in wheel chairs; men in casts with arms braced at grotesque angles; the kids of the show coming in the rain after the performance to banter with the bed patients as they were being lifted gently into the ambulances after the show; the cast going thru the wards during the days singing snatches from the show [the GI favorite was Ado Annie and her 'I Cain't Say No'] and serving dinner to the badly wounded men. Anyway, it was something to warm your heart."

Still another Guild show is being offered the U. S. O., provided the actors can get back after 14 weeks. It's "Othello," with most of the original cast. José Ferrer would play "Charley's Aunt" on the side and Paul Robeson would sing at the hospitals.

But all that is overseas and our problem is here in Chicago. I would welcome any suggestions you might make between now and the June 7 date of that meeting.

Smoke, But No Fire

Charles Wright, who plays Clarence in the Erlanger's "Life with Father," calmed a nervous audience at yesterday's matinée when smoke came thru the ventilator as some one doused a bucket of water on a short lived flame.

Visitor

John Van Druten went thru town on his way to New York and the problems that harass the author of long run hits. He has to direct Frances Heflin [sister of Van Heflin] to replace Joan Tetzel in "I Remember Mama," and he has to help Alfred de Liagre Jr., the producer, think up "The Voice of the Turtle" actresses to replace Betty Field, who is ill, and Audrey Christie, getting tired, in New York, and Betty Lawford, also tired, in Chicago.

Notes

"Round Trip," an unsavory echo by the authors of "Wallflower," had Lewis Nichols of the New York Times writing, "The season seems to be drawing to a close with a shudder and none too soon." Sidney Blackmer, June Walker, and Pat Kirkland are in it, along with $10,000 invested by Renee Carroll, Sardi's best known hat check girl. . . . Not even Ethel Waters and Josh White could keep "Blue Holiday" in the black. It closed abruptly, which is too bad for two of the most gifted of Negro entertainers.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 30—Barbara Stanwyck is set to play Catherine in "The Searching Wind" for Hal Wallis. Lillian Hellman, who wrote it, may bring the finished script out in July. . . . It was John Decker who painted Barbara as the angel of death for "The Two Mrs. Carrolls." . . . Congratulations to Priscilla Lane and Maj. Joe Howard. They're having a baby. . . . John Harvey, who co-starred with Betty Grable in "Pin-Up Girl," has been here two years. That's all he's done. But while waiting, he and his wife, Judy Parrish, wrote a play about their struggles, and a Broadway producer wants to do it. So John's got his release and they're on their way back to Broadway. . . . Sam Wood has Gen. De Gaulle's permission to make "Tatiana" in France, and don't be too surprised if Ingrid Bergman does it. After all, she has a weakness for Wood's direction. He did "Bells" and "Saratoga Trunk."

A Pretty Beggar She'd Be

Joan Fontaine may soon be on the corner with a tin cup in her hand. She's on her third or fourth suspension. Last story submitted to her was "While We Wait"—a little yarn David Selznick picked up five years ago for $4,000. She had words with her boss back in New York when he said, "You're a fool if you don't re-sign with me. Why, Jennifer Jones will have more money in 10 years than you'll have." "I don't doubt it," said Joan, and that ended that. . . . Even our pickets have changed their tactics. Outside the Goldwyn studio, where "Tomorrow Is Forever" is being made, a raft of pickets were uncomplimentary as various players went thru the gate. Today, however, all is sweetness and light. A phonograph is playing Viennese waltzes and the walkers cheer actors as they go into the lot.

That's What the Man Says

Ludwig Bemelmans phoned from Cedars of Lebanon hospital to say he was down with pneumonia—would his friends please omit flowers and skip visiting him? He's getting much work done, his secretary is beautiful, he's dictating from a horizontal position on his tummy. It seems he was out riding a headstrong mare. The horse threw him, but he clung on, and for four hours was dazed but not blacked out, so he's got pneumonia. That's what he told me. His novel about Hollywood will take three more years to write—most difficult thing he's ever tackled. In other countries characters are either black or white. Here they're six shades of green. His leading character is a cute little pig. Well, Disney glorified three of them. . . . Since her Metro release, Myrna Loy is talking a deal with Hal Wallis. But I don't believe Myrna wants to tie up with any one. She'd be smart to free lance and do a picture when a good one turns up.

All Around the Town

Somerset Maugham will be a house guest with George Cukor while here working on his own story, "Razor's Edge." . . . Well, what do you know? Jimmy Dorsey bought Tony Pastor a saxophone. . . . I swooned—and he nearly did—when Dick Powell was stopped by two lady leathernecks who handed him some cigarets and chewing gum. . . . "Man shortage!" said a pal, when he saw Mrs. Jerry Colonna and Mrs. Bob Hope dining alone at Tall o' the Cock. . . . Louise ["Roughly Speaking"] Randall Pierson is throwing a champagne party as her husband, Harold, is decorating a shop in the valley. That's about the only thing he hasn't tried. I don't mean champagne—decorating. . . . Clive Brook arrives here the middle of June.

Restraint May Make Children Poor Visitors

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

I know of a great many mothers whose houses are their own exclusive property. It is "my lamp," "my rug," "my expensive chair," "my beautiful polished table," and so forth. Husband or child, or both, live in this house on sufferance. Because of this fact I wrote an article some time ago on letting your home be your child's home too, and giving him the physical freedom of it.

As is inevitable, of course, one mother of several children misunderstood my stand. She stated that her next door neighbor allowed her children freedom to be destructive and untidy so consistently, that she dreaded their entrance into her own home.

It is quite true that a child raised in such a household might carry her home habits with her when visiting. But my own experience as a mother and homekeeper and that of my family when I was a child points up rather spectacularly another angle of this whole discussion of giving a child reasonable freedom in his own home.

My experience has been that the child who is utterly repressed at home in behavior, as well as in the material freedom of his house, is the one who cuts loose when he gets into the homes of his young friends.

There is, of course, a happy and intelligent medium between allowing a child a destructive and disorderly freedom, and not allowing him to have any real use at all of the only home he possesses. The child who is taught necessary restraints but allowed every other reasonable freedom will conduct himself considerately.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	4 hearts	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of clubs.

The bidding of today's hand might make it appear to the casual observer that North and South were unduly cautious in their method of reaching the final contract. As a matter of fact, they were both justified in exercising restraint. North's abundance of trumps makes the hand appear to be stronger than it actually is. Unless the opener can bid again it is very doubtful that a game will be made. South, on the other hand, would not be justified in jumping to four hearts on a simple raise which might denote a relatively indifferent hand. His three heart bid is an inquiry into the nature of the raise and North, of course, is delighted at the opportunity to bid again.

West opened the jack of clubs and East won with the ace, South falsecarded with the king, a futile attempt at deception. In the first place South should be anxious to have the suit continued and in the second place East could not possibly be fooled, because the lead of the jack shows that West has not the queen. Had South followed with the queen East might possibly not realize the true holding because partner could conceivably have led from the king, jack, ten and South might be falsecarding with queen.

East, realizing that the defense had only one club trick and at most one diamond trick [which could not be lost if West held the ace], decided to cash what spade tricks were available. He led the ace and then the six and declarer had no choice but to let the spade ride to the jack. East's general idea was right and his defense would have been proper had the jack of spades not been exposed in dummy. He should have allowed for the fact that declarer might have the king. Indeed, if West held the ace of diamonds, declarer was bound to have the king of spades to justify his rebid.

The proper play at trick two was the queen of spades. If South held the ace of diamonds, then West would very likely have the king of spades, and the lead of the queen would not hurt. As it was, declarer would win the queen with the king and when West subsequently got in with the ace of diamonds a spade continuation would net the defense two more tricks.

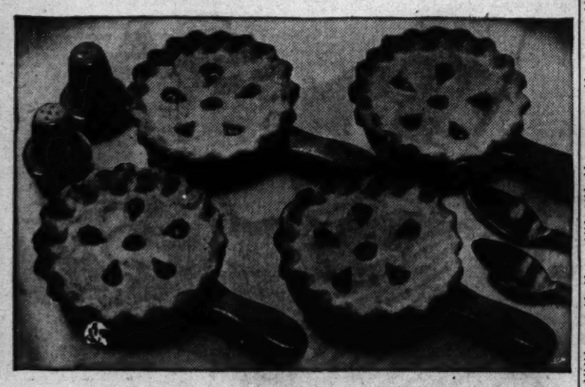
Meat Pie is Point-Thrifty
... DELICIOUS ENOUGH FOR COMPANY DINNERS

That same delicious stew you toss together quickly on busy days puts on company airs when you dress it up with a pastry topping. Whether it's beef, veal, pork or lamb you find on the market, any of them will make a delicious point-thrifty company dish using the recipe below.



Individual Lamb Pie... or use beef, pork or veal

1. Mix together 2 tbsp. flour, ½ tsp. salt, 1/8 tsp. pepper
2. In it, roll ¼ lb. lamb stew, cubed
3. Brown in 2 tbsp. fat
4. Add & brown 2 tbsp. minced onion
5. Add 4 cups boiling water
6. Cover and simmer 1½ hours
7. Add 1 cup diced potatoes, ½ cup sliced celery, ¼ cup diced turnips, 4 small onions, ¼ bay leaf
8. Cover and simmer until vegetables are tender. Remove bay leaf.
9. Thicken with 2 tbsp. flour mixed with ¼ cup water
10. Add 3 tsp. Wilson's B-V dissolved in a small amount of the hot mixture.
11. Transfer to a casserole or individual ramekins, top with flaky pastry (use 1 cup flour, ½ tsp. salt, 1/3 cup Wilson's Bake-Rite, 2½ tbsp. water) and bake at 400° F. about 20 min. Serves 4.

Clip Recipe Here

Hurry-Up Method

Even company dinners often need to be hurry-up affairs these days. You can make the stew the previous day and also combine all ingredients for the pastry except the water. This makes it possible to have the pies ready to pop into the oven by the time the oven is hot.

Simple Menu

The addition of a generous serving of fruit salad served with Wilson's Mayonnaise, hot rolls with Certified Margarine and fresh strawberry Bavarian cream with coffee will make this meal one to be remembered.

B-V Sauerbraten Gravy

Have you given up hopes of having sauerbraten for the duration? Cheer up, for here's good news. You can have the delicious flavor of sauerbraten in this B-V sauerbraten gravy with nary a bit of meat nor a red point spent. Here's how:

Heat together 1 quart water, ½ cup vinegar, ¾ cup brown sugar, 1½ tsp. salt, 3 tbsp. Certified Bacon drippings, 4 tsp. Wilson's B-V, dissolved in a small amount of the hot mixture. Stir in 16 ginger snaps, rolled fine. Simmer until ginger snaps are thoroughly dissolved. It's grand served on bread.

George Rector

WARN CONGRESS MEN'S CLOTHING FAMINE IS NEAR

Summer Wear Scarce, Retailers Say

A Burlap Suit

Portland, Ore., May 30 (AP)—"It's a good suit, every itch of it," says George J. Daudlin, ship yard worker who protests that clothing prices are too high. Giving his protest point, Daudlin made his own model and declares he'll wear it to church for the duration. The material is burlap feed sacks, trimmed with a red trademark and plastered with war stamps.

New York, May 30 [Special]—Manufacturers of men's suits, who assert that war production board restrictions are tying the industry in knots and will cause an acute shortage of clothing next winter, have opened a campaign in congress to eliminate WPB rules and assure an adequate flow of goods to retail stores.

The shortage already is so severe that retailers have only a limited supply of summer weight woolen suits, and executives of many men's clothing stores assert they may be forced out of business next winter unless congress acts to alleviate the situation.

Manfred Goldman, president of Cohen, Goldman & Co., has told congressmen that "returning service men in cities thruout the country have been unable to find civilian clothing of the style and price desired." He predicted the situation would become chaotic unless congress acts.

Store Stocks Low

Stores which usually start the spring season with thousands of summer weight men's suits are operating now on stocks that are counted in the hundreds, and some stores are selling only on order or to long time customers, it was learned.

With suits in the higher price ranges already harder to find than a few months ago, low priced suits have become a drug on the market and retailers are cutting down their orders. "The public doesn't want to buy them," said a spokesman for one store which has a large volume trade in low priced suits. "Every one has money now and wants to buy the high priced clothes he couldn't afford in the past."

Most clothes now are being made out of manufacturers' stocks accumulated before the WPB froze the production of worsted goods early this year. The freeze was extended until Aug. 18, and even if it is lifted then it will not allow enough time for manufacturers to deliver new winter suits to retailers before January, Goldman asserted.

Urges Release of Yarn

Goldman urged that the WPB unfreeze immediately 25 per cent of quality yarn for the manufacture of suits, and set up an over-all list of requirements for lend-lease, the military services, and the home front to assure some relief to United States business men and consumers.

Pointing out that England controls a vast supply of foreign wools which can be made available for manufacture in France, Italy, and Belgium, Goldman said, "There is no reason why the United States should do more than contribute her share in working out the clothing needs for those in Europe."

Most retail stores report they can fit almost any customer seeking a suit, but the customer can't be too particular about the pattern or color. The customer may find a suit in the color and pattern he wants if he shops around enough, but he may wind up taking what he can get in his size.

Many stores are on a voluntary rationing system, limiting customers to one suit. The benefits of this system are extremely limited, however, since a buyer can travel from store to store and buy as many suits as he can find that will fit.

DAY by DAY on the FARM by GAIL COMPTON

May 30, 1945.

THE herdsman is keeping a close eye on the pastures used by the dairy cattle these days. This is the time of year when weeds cause undesirable flavors in the cow's milk.

One of the worst offenders among all the weeds is wild garlic. The weed is palatable to the cows and they will eat it readily. Once eaten, the flavor enters the blood stream and promptly appears in the milk. The same thing happens when the cows eat wild onions. These weeds make the milk unmarketable.

Expensive Weeds

Other weeds common to Illinois pastures that will produce an undesirable flavor in milk are daisies, goldenrod, black-eyed Susans, ragweed, osage oranges, and goat weed. Good dairymen will watch their pastures, and keep these weeds destroyed. Most of them will be ignored by the cows if plenty of good feed is available. Let the grass become short, however, and the animals soon will start eating the weeds.

The value of alfalfa as hay and pasture for dairy cattle was the subject of an interesting experiment at Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind. Experts analyzed the value of an acre of the forage when it was all cut for hay, when it was both pastured and harvested, and when it was used for pasture alone.

Results of Alfalfa Tests

When the first cutting was taken and the second pastured, the return per acre was $89.71. When the first cutting was pastured and the second harvested, the income was $96.91 per acre. The income from pasture was determined by deducting the cost of grain fed from the value of the milk sold.

The experiment also proved the value of pasturing the entire crop instead of marketing the alfalfa as hay. The value of the hay for the two crops was $48.80 per acre, but when it was pastured entirely the income was $108.03 per acre.

These results further established that, even if the crop harvested is a legume which helps the soil, removing the crop robs the ground of valuable nutriment. The best way for a farmer to send a crop to market is to let it go in the form of meat, milk, or poultry.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

GARDENERS who made March or early April plantings of head lettuce now are faced with the task of thinning these rows. Most vegetable seedlings are discarded in the thinning process, but this is not the case with head lettuce. The uprooted plants should be used on the table or transplated.

By using extreme care in transferring the seedlings, it is possible to produce mature heads from transplants. An ordinary kitchen paring knife is the best implement to use in the moving process. The blade should be driven into the ground on all sides of the seedling to be transplanted, leaving the tap root intact with a cube of soil around it. Then the entire plant and its original soil should be moved to a prepared place in a new row and watered.

Transplanted head lettuce seedlings tend to send up seed stalks earlier than plants left in their first location, therefore must often be used before they reach full size.

GARDEN LEADERS FROM 5 STATES TO CONFER HERE

Garden leaders from five states will attend a regional conference on home food production to be held tomorrow in the Stevens hotel. The meeting was called by Paul C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., newly appointed federal director of home food production. Conferees will represent Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky.

The purpose of the meeting is to advise garden leaders on methods of offsetting the abnormal spring weather conditions which have interfered with the start of home gardening in many areas.

Stark recently announced that home gardening will be as important this season as in the past war years because of reductions in output of commercially canned foods and allocations of foods for European relief.

3 RIVAL FIELDS RUN A CORN RACE TO AID FARMERS

Starved Acres Lose to Fertilized Land

BY GAIL COMPTON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Urbana, Ill., May 30—The oldest experimental farm fields in the nation, the Morrow plots at the University of Illinois college of agriculture, are again being prepared for planting. This season will mark the 69th consecutive year in which accurate records have been kept of the yield of the ground under various cropping conditions.

In 1876, Prof. George E. Morrow started experimenting on the plots to determine how Illinois soil reacted to corn and what effect the rotation of corn, oats, and clover had on the soil; and to discover the value of feeding the earth.

On one plot nothing but corn has been planted since 1888 and the soil has not been treated with fertilizer. In the first year that area, one-twentieth of an acre, yielded an average of 54.3 bushels of corn per acre. Last year it produced only 18.8 bushels. Because this soil has been robbed every year it now would take 184 acres of such ground to give the yield of 100 acres in 1888.

Value of Rotation Shown

Corn, oats, and clover were rotated on one plot starting in 1892. Then the corn yield was 70.2 bushels per acre. The oats were harvested and the clover removed as hay and nothing was added to the soil. Last year this plot produced 53.2 bushels of corn per acre.

In an adjoining plot the same procedure was carried out but lime, manure, and phosphate were returned to the soil. Last year the ground produced 100.4 bushels of corn per acre.

The value of proper crop rotation and soil conservation to the average farmer is illustrated by the fact that the cost of producing a bushel of corn dropped when rotation was used and fertilizer was added. On the plot which had nothing but corn on it, it cost 69 cents to produce a bushel of corn. On the plot planted only to corn which received fertilizer the cost was 45 cents. On the plot where the crop rotation was used as well as fertilizer the cost fell to 33 cents a bushel.

Land Values Increased

The properly treated plots now are producing on 85 acres the equivalent of the production of 100 acres in 1888. The net value of the land where only corn has been planted is around $30 an acre. Where the rotation has been practiced plus the fertilizer, the land is valued at $140.

Where proper farming methods have been followed the trend of yields is steadily upward and the soil gains in valuable organic matter each year. Where the soil is robbed the yields have fallen consistently and because the organic matter in the plots has been depleted the land floods easily and does not retain water during dry spells.

The Morrow plots are a lasting object lesson to the farmers on the worth of proper crop and soil treatment.

EXPERT REPORTS TODAY ON TRIAL WITHOUT CORPSE

Dr. Wilton Krogman, University of Chicago anthropologist, will report today to State's Atty. Tuohy on tests made in the furnace of the apartment building at 6855 Clyde av., where the body of Mrs. Rose Michaelis is believed to have been cremated on Feb. 28. Human bones and tissue were burned in the furnace last week by the authorities to determine whether it was possible to eliminate all trace of a body in that manner. Joseph Nischt, 30, janitor, who confessed cremating Mrs. Michaelis' body and later recanted, faces trial on a murder charge tomorrow.

QUIZZLE AND ESPINO GOLD RUN DEAD HEAT IN PEABODY STAKES

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN

Allen S. Higgins' Quizzle, winner of three straight races this spring and the 4 to 5 favorite of a record crowd of 37,524, was forced to share first place with Mrs. Frank Nugent's Espino Gold in the 17th running of the Lincoln Fields $5,000 added Francis S. Peabody handicap at Hawthorne yesterday when the pair came all the way down the stretch as a team and went under the wire together in a dead heat.

Billy Nichols

Quizzle, 7 year old son of Milkman, made the pace under good rating by Apprentice Billy Nichols and saved ground thruout on the rail as Espino Gold, with Paul Glidewell in the saddle, made a stirring battle of it under vigorous handling in the last quarter. Hyman Friedberg's Bolo's Choice never was far back and rallied when roused by Jockey J. W. Martin, closing well to save the show from C. H. Dursch's Twixt, a 50 to 1 shot in the field of eight.

Winners Get $2,485 Each

Quizzle, which won the $5,000 Crete handicap last Saturday, returned $2.40, $2.40, and $2.20 across the board. Espino Gold paid $3.60, $3.80, and $3. Bolo's Choice returned $3 to show. Quizzle's owner, a construction man from Omaha, Neb., and Mrs. Nugent, a resident of Colinsville, received $2,485 each as their share of the purse.

It was the second straight Peabody victory for Quizzle which just nosed out Mrs. Robert McGarvey's Night Shadow in the 1944 running. Night Shadow, a 5 year old mare, was withdrawn earlier in the day because of the heavy top impost of 121 pounds. Quizzle carried 117 pounds yesterday, while Espino Gold handled 114 in the mile and one-sixteenth race. The winners' time was 1:48, one and three-fifths seconds slower than Quizzle's mark last year.

Not only did Lincoln Fields' attendance mark of 32,758 fall but the day's mutuel handle went far above last year's record of $1,229,087 when final tabulation of the eight race program showed $1,586,718 had been wagered. The lowest handle of the afternoon was $106,932 for the first race. The feature event was the high spot, $233,853.

Net Receipts to Charity

Leon Tikulski's Kentucky Derby candidate, Icangetit, 3 year old son of Stagehand-Scotch Maid, showed lots of class in winning the $3,000 La Grange handicap, fifth race on the card, from six other thorobreds. The colt beat W. H. Bishop's veteran campaigner, Final Glory, by a length under a good ride by Glidewell, who will handle him in the Derby.

Icangetit won the Joliet stakes as a 2 year old and finished second to John Marsch's Free For All in the Washington Park Futurity last summer. The chestnut took the six furlongs race in 1:12 4-5., and then continued for a mile in 1:42.

Yesterday's program was dedicated to charity, the Red Cross getting two-thirds of the net receipts and the Chicago service men's centers the remainder. Officials estimated the donations to the two funds would amount to approximately $145,000.

Lt. Col. Hanley to Be Dinner Guest Tonight

Lt. Col. Richard E. [Dick] Hanley tonight will be guest of honor at a dinner given by John L. Keeshin, owner of the Chicago club in the All-America professional football conference. Col. Hanley, combat conditioning officer for the marine aviation corps, will become general manager and head coach of the Chicago team upon his return to civilian life.

Heading a group of more than 60 men prominent in Chicago and Illinois political, civic, military, and sports affairs will be Gov. Green. Other state officers present will be George F. Barrett, attorney general, and Edward J. Barrett, secretary of state.

Kelly, Dunham to Attend

The Chicago delegation will be headed by Mayor Kelly and Robert J. Dunham, president of the park board. The dinner will be held in the Blackstone hotel, starting at 6:30 o'clock. The military will be represented, among others, by Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Barzynski and Brig. Gen. W. E. Guthner.

Col. Hanley became head coach at Northwestern university in 1927 and remained there for eight years. During his tenure the Wildcats twice shared Western conference titles and the school's gridiron rivalry with Notre Dame reached its height. Col. Hanley will return to his marine assignment tomorrow.

REMOVE BAN ON PRODUCTION OF NEW GOLF BALLS

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—The ban on the manufacture of golf balls was lifted today. Supplies of new balls will be limited, however, the war production board said, to 224,000 dozen quarterly. Of this production, about 130,000 dozen will be available for civilians.

Civilians long have had to get along with "recap" balls. The new ball will be made with neoprene rubber thread. The cover will be of balata, as has been the practice for a number of years.

Racing Enjoys Its Heaviest Wagering Day

The 37,524 who wagered $1,586,718 at Hawthorne race track, a record for a Lincoln Fields meeting, helped swell the total at 11 racing plants to $13,476,021. This broke the national pari-mutual record of $11,556,394 set last year on Labor day at 10 tracks. Yesterday's racing crowds aggregated 330,195.

The Chicago Cubs, playing the New York Giants in a double header, drew 42,568, the largest crowd to watch baseball in Wrigley field since 1939. Major league attendance was 220,194, compared to the 160,020 who watched the games last Memorial day. National figures were compiled by the Associated Press.

Crowds Set Marks at 8 Tracks

The Lincoln Fields program on Memorial day in 1944 attracted 34,406 who bet $1,229,087. On that same afternoon the White Sox drew only 15,037 in a Comiskey park double header. The 247,556 patrons at 10 race tracks last Memorial day bet $10,326,027.

Attendance records were broken yesterday at eight of the 11 race tracks, including the Lincoln Fields mark at Hawthorne. Pari-mutuel marks were established at seven of the horse parks. Top racing crowd was 76,649 at Santa Anita, near Los Angeles, also a California record. The $3,051,776 wagered was a Santa Anita record.

Jamaica in New York led the nation in its biggest record breaking race day. Its 64,537 customers shattered the previous New York attendance standard by 12,452. World betting marks were broken for a single race—$596,679 in the second division of the Wood Memorial; for a seven-race program—$3,564,151, and for the daily double, $202,216.

TRACK—	ATTENDANCE	WAGERED
Jamaica	*64,537	*$3,564,151
Santa Anita	*76,649	*3,051,776
Narragansett	*42,000	*1,846,216

Chicago's huge baseball turnout was topped only by that in the Yankee stadium, where 67,816 witnessed two games between the Yanks and the Tigers. This was the largest major league crowd of the season. Major league figures for the day:

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD

CUB statisticians who had run a slight fever over the fact Phil Cavarretta, Cubs' first baseman, had accepted 289 chances without an error going into the game of May 26, were chilled somewhat when they found that in one span Stuffy McInnis handled 1,625 chances without a bobble. . . . Five minutes after this contrast was detected Cavarretta made his first error of the 1945 National league season. . . . In the same game the depressed statisticians observed Pitcher Bill Lee had made the high total of eight assists. . . . Scurriers to the record book showed Ed Walsh made 11 assists in each of two games in 1907. . . . Johnny Lopgden, who rode Don Ameche's Sir Bim to victory in last Saturday's $25,000 race at Santa Anita, was astride Count Fleet when John Hertz's colt won the 1943 Kentucky Derby. . . . Charles F. Walsh, general manager of the Cleveland Rams, denies that the club is for sale. . . . "Since Capt. Daniel F. Reeves purchased the Rams in 1941 no one associated with the club has directly or indirectly contacted any one regarding the purchase of the team," Walsh says. . . . Neither Chicago ball club is singing about the charms of the Harlem river thus far this season. . . . The Cubs thought they were pretty good and lost four straight in the Polo Grounds on the Harlem's banks, and less than 10 days later the erstwhile leading White Sox were slapped down four straight in near-by Yankee stadium, across the Harlem's murky waters. . . . Roger Foehringer, a member of Loyola Academy's 1942 football team, is home on leave after escaping from a German prison camp. . . . Assigned to the bakery during his imprisonment, Foehringer kept up his strength by adding stolen bread to his camp rations. . . .

Jefferson was awarded the distinguished flying cross overseas. . . . Bill Hart, Brooklyn third baseman, has been reclassified 4-F. . . . The Cub management has had more annoyance trying to keep track of Jorge Comellas, Cuban pitcher, this spring by several million per cent than occasioned en masse by those earlier Latin American Cubs—Cubans Mike Gonzales and Chico Hernandez and Puerto Rican Hi Bithorn. . . . Jorge is what-y'-call-heem a pain in the neck, and no such ball player as Mike, Chico, or Hi. . . . Coach Allyn McKeen of Mississippi State says Shorty McWilliams has completely recovered from his knee operation and he predicts he will star for West Point next fall. . . . Miss Greenhow

For years Miss Greenhow taught Latin,
Retiring not long ago,
How it must have tried her patience
As she'd labor to work up a glow
Anent the glories of ancient Rome,
But the fellows somehow wouldn't buy,
But a war can change many, many things,
Miss Greenhow now thinks with a sigh.

In those days just didn't click,
"Beyond the Alps lies Italy"
Was merely a phrase quite slick;
Caesar crossing the Rubicon
Was only a figure of speech,
But now many fellows have been there and seen
Those things once so far out of reach.

Miss Greenhow now sits and quietly smiles
As she muses of bygone joys,
Her lap full of letters and cards and gifts
She's received from some of "her boys";
She recalls how she used to chant to them
About all roads leading to Rome,
But now, it would seem, in each heart there's a dream

Lee Beats A's, 5-2; Then Sox Take 4-2 Loss

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

[BOX SCORES ON PAGE 21]

Philadelphia, Pa., May 30—The White Sox found the garrulous Buck Newsom a most handy old gentleman this afternoon, but made a less happy discovery when they attempted to make similar use of willowly Russ Christopher. The portly Buck was such a soft touch that he had to quit work early, leaving a 5 to 2 defeat for his Athletic mates in the first half of a double header. Then Christopher took charge, the Chicagoans being somewhat helpless while he was fashioning his seventh victory, 4 to 2.

Newsom's misfortunes, represented by 12 hits in his seven innings of work, made the afternoon one of comparative leisure for Thornton Lee, his opponent. Lee was given a one run lead in the opening inning and additions were made one at a time until he had a 5 to 0 edge and a possible shutout for his sixth triumph of the year.

Lee's Shutout Bid Fails

The shutout, however, disappeared under pressure in the seventh, the A's getting three hits.

Johnny Humphries was nominated for the attempt to tame the skilled Christopher and at least for a spell seemed equal to the assignment. He held his own until a homer by Bob Estalella, a pass, and triple gave the Athletics a two run lead in the fourth.

The Sox finally got back into a tie in the eighth, but it was short lived. Humphries fell apart in the same inning when Larry Rosenthal tripled, Estalella and Dick Siebert singled, and George Kell produced a fly ball, the net being two runs.

The Sox gave Lee encouragement in the first inning, a run coming after a pass to Wally Moses and a triple by Oris Hockett. The next inning also produced a run, the start of which was a pass to Roy Schalk, who was bunted to second by Cass Michaels, but nipped when he tried to score on a single by Mike Tresh. Lee then walked and Moses singled to score Tresh. The next run counted in the fourth and the process was quite simple. Schalk singled, Michaels bunted and after Tresh had been thrown out Lee singled to send in Schalk.

Cuccinello Hits Triple

The Sox remained faithful to their one run per inning quota in the sixth despite an error, a single, and a double. Tresh made two bases on a bad throw by Kell and scored on Lee's second single. Then Moses doubled, Lee stopping at third. Neither Kerby Farrell nor Hockett could assist. In the seventh Tony Cuccinello tripled to right and scored the fifth run when Michaels singled.

A double by Pinch Man Charles Metro put Lee into his seventh inning difficulties. Rosenthal also doubled, Metro scoring, after which a single by Estalella sent Rosenthal across the plate.

Estallela Slams One

The second game progressed uneventfully until Estallela poked his homer into the left field pavilion in the fourth. This jarred Humphries to such an extent that he handed a pass to Siebert, who scored after two were out on Joe Burns' triple

The Sox owned a grand total of three hits off Christopher for five innings and the fact that they added a hit in the sixth wasn't because of any particular batting skill. Moses opened the inning with a tall fly to right which Burns lost in the sun. The ball cracked him on the back of the head and Moses dashed to third, scoring on Farrell's infield out. Then Moses tied it for a few minutes in the eighth when he walked, took third on Farrell's single, and scored on Hockett's fly.

42,568 WATCH CUBS LOSE, 8 TO 6 THEN TROUNCE GIANTS, 11 TO 2

BY EDWARD BURNS

A crowd of 42,568, largest to see a baseball program in Wrigley field since 1939, gave the Cubs a roaring Bronx cheer yesterday as they started the second game of a double header in the same nervous fashion they had shown in blowing the first game, 8 to 6. This razz from their worshipers aroused the Chicagoans from the fear and trembling they had displayed in losing the first five of their engagements with the Giants this year and the lads forthwith knocked out Bill Voiselle, who won his first eight decisions—two over the Cubs—and romped on to an 11 to 2 victory over the league leaders.

Winning pitcher was Bob Chipman, absent from starting duty since May 14 while convalescing. It was his second victory, and like his first, over Pittsburgh on April 22, it was a three hit performance.

Pafko Heads Cub Sluggers

The Cubs made 16 hits and the mightiest of the sluggers was Andy Pafko, who knocked a single and a three run homer off Voiselle and a double off Harrell which figured in two runs in the fifth. Stan Hack knocked a triple and a single, Don Johnson, who made two of the Cubs' five errors in the jittery first game and one which gave the Giants their run in the first inning of the second game, made amends with a double and single off Voiselle and a single off Harrell.

All the other Cubs in the starting lineup—Peanuts Lowrey, Phil Cavarretta, Mickey Livingston, Bill Nicholson, Lennie Merullo, and Chipman, made at least one hit each.

Cubs Remain in 4th Place

The Cubs remained in fourth place as the result of yesterday's efforts, still 6½ games behind the Giants, who will be their foes again this afternoon.

After leading, 3 to 2, 6 to 4, and 6 to 5, in the first game, the Cubs were unable to develop scoring punch against Bill Emmerich, who replaced Andy Hansen after effecting their run total in the third inning.

The winning punch for the Giants was furnished by Ernie Lombardi with a two run homer in the fifth off Ray Prim, who replaced Hank Wyse.

Leon Treadway opened the first game with a single and scored when George Hausmann dumped a double near the right foul line. Hausmann went on to third when Johnson relayed the ball to the screen. Mel Ott doubled to right center, scoring Hausmann.

Cubs Score Three Runs in First

The Cubs made three runs in their first inning to take the lead. Successive singles by Johnson, Nicholson, and Cavarretta, an infield out, and a wild pitch got the three runs home before Hansen fanned Pafko to end the inning.

A nervous Cub defense made possible another pair of runs for the Giants in the second inning. Buddy Kerr was safe when Bill Schuster kicked his grounder, but Hansen fouled to Cavaretta on an attempted sacrifice. After Treadway forced Kerr the Cubs, for the third time in two games, showed they can't get a runner out after trapping him off first. Hank Wyse trapped Treadway with a throw to Cavarretta, but the Cub captain threw wide to Schuster. Treadway stopped at second on the error and Hausmann came thru with his second extra base hit in two innings, a triple which scored Treadway with the tying run. Ott again hit safely, a single this time, scoring Hausmann to put the Giants ahead, 4 to 3.

Manager Grimm made some changes in the home second, but the apparent rattles continued even on offense. With one down Frank Secory batted for Schuster and singled to center. Merullo went to first to run for Secory and Ed Sauer batted for Wyse. Merullo overdid his assignment in running for Secory. He ran to second on Sauer's foul to Lombardi and easily was doubled off first.

Cubs Take 6 to 4 Lead

Prim became the Cub pitcher at the start of the third inning and retired Weintraub, Lombardi, and Gardella in order. Then the Cubs put on another three run inning to take a 6 to 4 lead. After Hack had flied out Johnson again singled and scored on Nicholson's double to right. Cavarretta was given an intentional pass and Livingston beat out an infield hit, loading the bases. Pafko also beat out an infield single, scoring Nicholson. Emmerich replaced Hansen. Cavarretta got home on Lowrey's infield out, then Merullo, who had replaced Schuster at short after his pinch running exploit, was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Prim struck out.

The Cubs' fourth infield error was a factor in the production of the Giants' fifth run, in the fourth inning. Kerr opened with a single and advanced on Emmerich's sacrifice. Treadway singled to center, Hausmann bounced a double play ball to Johnson near second. Johnson started to make the out at second, then made a two foot toss toward Merullo. When the ball dropped to the ground. Kerr had scored, Treadway was safe at second and Hausmann on first. Prim then fanned Ott and made Reyes roll to Cavarretta.

The Giants Take Lead for Keeps

The Giants grabbed the lead for keeps in the fifth. Weintraub, first up, walked and trotted home on Lombardi's homer, a line shot into the end of the left field bleacher. That made the score 7 to 6 and that ratio prevailed thru a series of Cub frustrations.

Claude Passeau went in to pitch the ninth and Reyes led off with a single, then moved over on Weintraub's sacrifice. Lombardi was given an intentional pass, whereupon Gardella sent a short fly to right which Nicholson dropped. Nicholson retrieved the ball and had a force play at second, Lombardi having held first on the fly and being none too rapid thereafter. However, Nicholson's throw got away from Lowrey, who had replaced Merullo as the third Cub shortstop. Thus Nicholson got an

Ott's New Record

MEMORIAL day, 1945, will always be a memorable day for Mel Ott, manager of the Giants. Yesterday in Wrigley field Ott smashed the National league record for total bases. In the first inning of the opening game between the Giants and the Cubs, Ott increased his lifetime total bases to 4,889 with a double off the pitching of Hank Wyse to surpass the 28 year old record of Honus Wagner. The historic hit was a tricky grounder that went past Stan Hack when he cut over in front of short in a futile lunge at the ball. Ott set his new record in his 20th season whereas it took Wagner 21 years.

JEEP, HOOP JR. WIN AT JAMAICA; 64,537 WATCH

Set New Attendance and Mutuel Marks

New York, May 30 (AP)—Two strong eastern candidates for the June 9 Kentucky Derby came out of the Wood Memorial at Jamaica today when Jeep and Hoop Jr. won the two sections of the $25,000 added stake. A record crowd of 64,537 sent betting marks soaring to new highs.

Jeep, carrying the colors of Col. C. V. Whitney, won the first division of the mile and one-sixteenth stake by three lengths and Hoop Jr., owned by F. W. Hooper, duplicated the feat.

The turnout surpassed all previous attendance marks in New York and set a new world wagering mark for seven races by pouring $3,564,151 thru the machines, topped the old daily double mark by betting $202,216, and surpassed the state's one race wagering with $596,679 on the second division of the Wood.

Approximately $130,000 was turned over to various war relief funds as the track's share of the day's net profits.

The Times favored Hooper's 3 year old son of Sir Gallahad III., as Eddie Arcaro sent Hoop Jr. over the route in 1:45. Jeep, sired by the English Derby winner, Mahmoud, was clocked in 1:45.4 with Arnold Kirkland riding.

Their manner of winning was entirely different. Jeep, far back in the early running went to the front just outside the eighth pole and pulled away with long strides.

Alert IV. Wins Yacht Club's Opening Race

Alert IV., owned and sailed by Dr. T. J. Morris, won the Chicago Yacht club's opening race for R class sloops off Belmont harbor yesterday. The yacht covered the 12-mile triangular course at an average speed of more than six miles per hour in the gusty southwest wind. Gossoon II., Carl Fox's entry, was runner-up, followed by Rear Commodore Ed Schnabel's Yankee.

Sloop Gusty Has Mishap

The 22 foot sloop Gusty, owned and sailed by Robert Rodgers, was dismasted during the second race of the Sheridan Shore Yacht club's Star class race off Wilmette harbor. Skipper Rodgers was in second place, ahead of seven other yachts, when a gust of wind disabled his craft. A coast guard patrol boat manned by Boatswain's Mate Heintz Tientka and Don Durant, M.M.M., both of the Wilmette station, towed the Gusty to shore.

Lane, Raymond Win

John Lane, sailing Don Bergman's High C, won the first race and Commodore Emerson Raymond with his brother Maurie as crew, won the second in the club flagship, Dolphin. The race committee consisted of Clive Jenkins, chairman; former Commodore Charles Pajeau, and Mrs. Robert Parks.

PROVISO LOSES, 3 TO 2; MORTON WINS CROWN

assist instead of an error for missing Gardella's fly, and the error was shifted to Lowrey. And while the scorer was making his observations, Reyes got home with another run the Giants didn't need.

And the Wolves Howled

In the first inning of the second game both sides scored, but thru highly diverse techniques. In the Giant half Chipman walked Treadway and Hausmann on eight straight wide ones. Ott sacrificed, and when Johnson failed to hold Cavaretta's throw Treadway scored, Hausmann reached third, and Ott first. It was here the wolves howled, briefly but effectively. Reyes attempted to sacrifice, but forced Ott. Weintraub popped to Hack and Steve Filippwicz struck out.

Hack opened the Chicago offensive with a triple to left and scored on Johnson's double to center.

The Cubs took the lead in the second. Nicholson opened with a single and went to third on Pafko's single. Morullo popped to Kerr in short left center and Nicholson got home before Kerr could whirl and throw to the plate.

Pafko Hits Three Run Homer

Here's how the big Cub third transpired: Johnson opened with a single and advanced on Lowrey's sacrifice. Cavaretta singled to left center, scoring Johnson, and took second on the throw in. Livingston grounded to Reyes; then Voiselle walked Nicholson. Pafko knocked the ball into Waveland av., over the bleachers beyond deep left center, his third homer of the year, scoring behind Cavarretta and Nicholson.

Voiselle did not come out for the fourth inning, and the Cubs promptly picked on his successor, Ray Harrell, one-time Cub. In the fourth successive singles by Chipman, Hack, and Johnson led to one run despite a base running mixup, and in the fifth a single by Livingston, a double by Pafko and a single by Merullo netted a pair of markers. In the sixth a two base error by Filipowicz on Johnson's fly and a single by Lowrey got a run home before anybody was out. Later in the inning Lowrey got home from second while Nicholson was beating out an infield hit to Weintraub. Ewald Pyle held the Cubs to one hit in the last two innings.

TARIFF PACTS ACT STUMBLES IN COMMITTEE

Russian Steel Plans Arouse Critics

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., May 30—Russian plans to expand steel production to equal America's pre-war output and the state department's program for "economic liberalization" today caused the senate finance committee to question further reduction of American import duties without congressional review.

The committee opened hearings on the house approved bill to extend the reciprocal trade agreements act for three years with a provision permitting the President to negotiate agreements with other nations cutting import duties as much as 75 per cent below the tariffs provided in the 1930 Hawley-Smoot act. Assistant Secretary of State Clayton supported the bill.

Walsh Reports Steel Plans

Sen. Walsh [D., Mass.] told the committee Russia is planning immediate expansion of her annual steel production from 10 million tp 60 million tons, a figure equal to American production when the war began. He said the information was given him by a "high government official."

Sen. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.] said he had the same information, but Clayton asserted the state department had made no study of Russian plans and had no idea what Russian production would be. Clayton added he was unable to ascertain whether Walsh's figure was correct.

"At the very time when Russia is expanding her steel production, our production, which we expanded to help Russia with tanks and guns and munitions, is falling off," O'Mahoney said. "And the state department is asking for authority to negotiate agreements and reduce tariffs 50 per cent below present levels without knowing what competing countries are planning."

Doubts Extent of Competition

Clayton said he did not believe Russian production would provide serious competition for many years.

"That's what we thought about her fighting ability," observed Sen. Bailey [D., N. C.]. "But she certainly built that up fast enough."

O'Mahoney said he plans to introduce an amendment to the trade agreements bill providing for congressional review of all agreements negotiated by the executive department with other nations.

In his defense of the trade agreements bill as it passed the house, Clayton explained it was part of the administration's scheme for international coöperation. Other parts are the Bretton Woods monetary agreements, the international reconstruction bank, and additional lending facilities for the export-import bank. The whole program amounts to "economic liberalization," he said.

"It is the making of rules and regulations surrounding the international exchange of goods," Clayton said. "It depends on whether we are willing to help the rest of the world get back on its feet."

"It means big loans," asserted Butler.

Keep Closed Plants Ready for War Need

The huge Studebaker aircraft engine plant at 5555 Archer av. and two others operated by the automobile company in South Bend and Fort Wayne, Ind., will be kept in a standby condition for possible future production of B-17 engines.

The government has 20 million dollars invested in building and equipment in the Chicago plant, 19 millions in the one at Fort Wayne, and 39 millions at South Bend, a company spokesman said. The Archer av. factory, which made parts for the final assembly plant in South Bend, employed 5,000 workers at its production peak last fall, but had only 2,500 on the pay roll when the closing order was received Tuesday.

Has Opportunity to Buy

The Studebaker company will be given an opportunity to purchase any of the three plants, which it has operated as a private contractor for the air technical service command when the Defense Plant corporation, which owns them, and the ATSC decide whether they shall be offered for sale, a spokesman for the DPC said. He said ultimate disposal of the plants still is in the discussion stage.

A company spokesman said Studebaker was caught off guard by the suddenness of the closing order, which was not expected for another month, and had made no plans for converting any of the three plants to peace time production if the ATSC decides to sell them.

Workers Get Referrals

Man power commission officials asserted the 2,500 Studebaker workers could be absorbed immediately into other plants, and that interviewers up to last night had referred about one-half of them to other jobs in Chicago.

Paul A. Jenkins, chairman of the Chicago production urgency committee and deputy regional director of the war production board, said new contracts have been placed in Chicago recently at the rate of 15 million dollars a week, and that at least 20 millions' worth are expected to be awarded here this week.

Jenkins predicted Chicago will be busy in war work long after most other large communities in the country will have slowed down or cut back to peace time levels.

JAP WAR HIKES ARMY TEXTILE, LEATHER NEEDS

Man Power Is Big Problem—Krug

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—Military demands for cotton textiles and leather products are heavier than they were for a two front war, the government said today in predicting a tighter civilian pinch. Requirements are at a high record, said Chairman Krug of the war production board.

Krug reported that in textiles the problem is mainly man power shortage, complicated by the attraction of workers to higher paying industries.

Exceed 1944 Use 30 Pct.

Military allocations for shoes and other leather items for the current and third quarters have been 30 per cent above the 1944 use rate, he said. Since "the basic difficulty is a lack of sufficient hide supplies," the increased military allotments must be at the expense of civilian, industrial, and export claims.

The shift to a one front war requires a substantial amount of clothing materials to "fill the pipe lines to the Pacific" for "soldiers who must fight under varying climatic conditions." He gave this report on textiles:

COTTON GOODS—Third quarter military allocations are expected to be 85 per cent of the cotton duck supply, 20 per cent of other carded goods, and almost 50 per cent of combed goods, which are the finer and more durable fabrics. Over-all war requirements are about 15 per cent higher than the 1944 quarterly average.

Require Most Worsteds

WOOL WOVEN GOODS—The military will take about 60 per cent of the supply in the third quarter, but will take virtually all of the worsteds, except for a small amount allocated for the gabardine shoe program and children's wear. Civilians will get only about one-quarter yard of wool woven goods, compared with normal needs of three times that much.

KNIT GOODS—Even if civilian supplies are cut to "dangerously low" levels, there is not enough man power to meet military requirements for heavy underwear. It may be necessary to "give consideration to restricting civilian sales to outdoor workers—in logging, farming, and similar occupations."

War Workers Award Is Won by Draftsman

BY PHILIP HAMPSON

F. H. H. Foss, 59, a draftsman, will receive the 34th Chicago Tribune War Workers Award for developing a device of great value in steel production. He is employed at the South Works of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation. His development speeds production, conserves metal, saves money, and promotes safety.

F. H. H. Foss

The presentation ceremony will be broadcast at 7:15 p. m. today by W-G-N. The award—symbolized by a diamond studded gold pin—will be presented to Foss by Lloyd G. Porter, machinist mate 2d class, a Chicago boy who was wounded at Guam and also served at Saipan and Tarawa.

Device Appears Simple

Like many of the other accomplishments which have won THE TRIBUNE award for Chicago area war workers, Foss's achievement appears simple. He invented a new kind of hook which, fastened to a cable or chain sling is used to transport steel within the plant. But that simple hook solved problems which provided many difficulties for the operators of South Works — the world's second largest steel mill.

For many years the industry has used a cumbersome hand forged "safety sling" hook which, when introduced, was a great improvement over its predecessors. It weighed about 200 pounds and despite a handle welded to it for the convenience of workers, was awkward to operate. All too often a worker would injure his hand in the handle. And frequently the handle would catch on material and break off and the hook would have to be replaced.

Uses Alloy Steel

Some years ago Foss visited an eastern steel mill where he saw chain made of alloy steel being used. [Alloy steel is stronger than conventional steel, and less of it is required. Consequently much weight is saved thru its use.]

Why not make the hook of heat treated alloy steel, too? Foss asked. [Heat treatment gives strength and toughness to steel.] But it wasn't quite so simple as all that. There is one essential for a steel plant hook—in the event it is about to fail it must give warning by bending.

Foss went to work on his problem, both on company time and his own. The metallurgists at the plant told him his plan was not feasible, but he finally proved his point by producing a hook that did all he claimed for it. It weighed about 40 pounds instead of 200 so was easy to manipulate. There was no handle to catch on materials. Most of the danger of injuring workers was eliminated. At the South Works alone about 5,000 pounds of high grade steel could be saved annually by using the new hook.

Saves Man Hours and Money

South Works alone saves $3,245 annually on the cost of the hooks as compared with the old and there is a further annual saving of $2,000 on repairs, or a total of $5,245. Elimination of handle repairs saves 2,000 man hours annually. Used in other steel and heavy manufacturing mills thruout the nation, its potential saving is enormous.

PREDICT LARGE ILLINOIS GAIN IN POST-WAR JOBS

N. A. M. Surveys 90 Major Companies

About 220,000 more industrial jobs will exist in Illinois industry after the Japanese are defeated than there were when the war started in Europe, the National Association of Manufacturers said yesterday. Illinois manufacturers will be able to employ 29 per cent more persons after the war than they did before.

The association's estimate of Illinois job opportunities was based on replies to a questionnaire from 90 manufacturers who employ about 8 per cent of the total industrial workers in the state.

Estimate Jobs at 970,000

In 1939 about 750,000 persons were working in factories in the state, and after the post-war reconversion period the total should be 970,000 industrial workers, the association said. The survey indicated only about 1 per cent of the state's factories will have fewer jobs than in 1939. About 16 per cent will employ about the same number.

About 56 per cent of the Illinois factories will not require any time for reconversion when war contracts terminate, as many are making the same products for war as they made in peace time. About 34 per cent will require from one day to four weeks to reconvert, and 7 per cent will need from five to eight weeks. A few will need longer time.

The association said the number that may be laid off temporarily during reconversion may run as high as 187,000, but approximately 87 per cent would be out less than four weeks. The remainder, or about 28,000, would face four weeks or more of unemployment.

Expect Some Withdrawals

A substantial number of present factory workers will wish to withdraw from such work for various reasons, N. A. M. said. Many persons, men and women, left other kinds of work to take war plant jobs. Some will wish to complete their educations, and a large number of women will resume housework.

Thus natural causes will account for a substantial number of workers who were on the job at the war peak, when employment was estimated at 1,085,000 workers.

CEILING PRICES OF ALL WHEAT LIFTED 3⅛ CENTS

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—Acting to meet legal requirements, the OPA today ordered an immediate increase of 3⅛ cents a bushel in wheat ceiling prices. The adjustment, covering all grades of the grain, was made to guarantee parity prices to growers, as stipulated by law.

The agency also announced a reduction of 2 cents a bushel in the discount for sample grades of wheat.

Noted Name in La Salle St. Soon to Pass

The name of the widely known brokerage house of Alfred L. Baker & Co. will be changed to Betts, Borland & Co., effective Monday. Arthur M. Betts, senior partner, said the company will remain in its present quarters at 111 S. La Salle st. and personnel and policies will be unchanged.

With the change one of the best known names in La Salle st. will pass. Alfred L. Baker, who died in 1927 and who was long active in civic life, founded the firm in 1896.

From 1896 to 1930 the firm occupied the ground floor corner at La Salle and Adams sts. in the old Home Insurance building. When the building was razed to make way for the Field building the firm moved to ground floor quarters which it occupies in the Borland building.

Financial, Civic Leaders

Many prominent persons in Chicago financial and civic affairs gathered in the company's old quarters to confer with Baker. Among them were Charles H. Wacker, John G. Shedd, Edward B. Butler, John V. Farwell, Morton D. Hull, David R. Forgan, Louis F. Swift, and Kellogg Fairbank.

Present active partners are Betts, Chauncy Blair Borland, Francis Peabody Butler, John H. Quinlan, Thomas Henderson, and John P. Wise.

Betts, the senior partner, was graduated from the Chicago Kent College of Law in 1913 and in the same year became associated with the Baker firm as manager of the bond department. He was made a partner in 1925. He has been a governor of the Chicago Stock exchange since 1932, and served five successive terms as chairman of the board of governors.

Borland Active in Banking

Borland has been a partner since 1930. He has long been prominent in Chicago banking and real estate circles, as well as civic affairs. He is managing owner of the Borland Properties and is a director of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company and the Elgin National Watch company.

Betts said the present complicated tax system has bewildered investors in their efforts to preserve their capital and use it productively—a situation which offers many opportunities for service. He is confident that congress will adopt a more conservative financial policy.

Fight on Realty Price Rise Studied

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP)—The administration was reported tonight to be seriously considering proposals designed to prevent further war time advances in prices of farm and urban real estate. One of the proposals pending in the office of economic stabilization would require purchasers to make down payments of at least 35 per cent of the purchase price of such property.

Officials close to the OES said the subject may be passed along to War Mobilizer Vinson and subsequently to President Truman.

Latest agriculture department reports show that farm land values have increased 52 per cent from 1935-'39 levels. Likewise, urban residential property has increased as much as 75 and 100 per cent in war production centers.

PUGET SOUND POWER

I wish information regarding Puget Sound Power and Light company. What is the status of public ownership agitation?—M. W.

This company, along with certain other services, supplies electricity to more than 400 communities at retail and to 14 others at wholesale, in western and central parts of Washington state.

Accompanying war production activities, operating revenues increased to $26,590,000 in 1944 from $16,362,000 in 1939. Net income also rose. It is believed that increased effects of the competition of federal power installations on the Columbia river will be felt after the war, however.

Agitation for public ownership of the company's facilities has continued for years, but the corporation has opposed any piecemeal disposition of its plants. Public utility districts had been formed in most of the counties served by the company prior to 1944, but none of the company's properties had been acquired by them, altho condemnation proceedings were instituted in a number of cases. Subsequently the system generally has remained intact. G. C. Myers, New York, who has been active in promoting public ownership in Nebraska, said recently he was considering making a cash offer for the company's properties.

Net income in 1944 was equal to $2.05 a share on the 21,177,879 common shares, compared with 68 cents in 1939, as adjusted to the present stock capitalization. The stock recently was quoted on the New York Curb exchange at about 16½. Also outstanding are 137,500 shares of $5 cumulative prior preference stock and a long term debt of $55,937,500.

TRUCK OWNERS, UNION GIRD FOR WAGE HEARING

Back Pay Is Big Problem for Monday Quiz

As officials of two truck drivers' unions prepared to appear before the national war labor board in Washington, D. C., next Monday afternoon to present wage demands above those already approved by the board, the trucking industry prepared to oppose their demands by asserting that retroactive pay given by the board, if ordered paid, will "ruin" many truck owners.

Refusal by members of the independent Chicago Truck Drivers' union to accept the board's wage increase decree of 8 cents an hour for a 51 hour week, caused the 6,500 union members to strike for eight days. Edward Fenner, executive director of the union, ordered the strike terminated May 23 after he said he had received a promise that the union's previous demands would be granted. He is prepared to present these demands to the board Monday, he announced.

To Ask Guaranteed Week

Fenner said he would ask a guaranteed 48 hour work week and a $5 increase in pay. He said he would also demand a two week vacation and pay for six legal holidays if the men do not work those days, and double time if they do.

"We've been promised we will receive what we want, and we will," Fenner said yesterday.

Similar union demands will be presented by H. E. Wood, secretary and treasurer of local 705 of the AFL teamsters' international union, who refused to allow his membership to vote to strike in sympathy with the independents. Kenneth Kindley, labor research director of the AFL union, will appear before the board with Wood.

Protest Heavy Back Pay

Walter McCarron, general manager of Illinois Motor Truck Operators association, which claims to represent nearly 500 cartage contractors and owners and Philip A. Smith, president of the Cartage Exchange of Chicago with William B. Crawford, his attorney, will appear before the board and oppose the unions' demands.

McCarron said that if the truckers are made to pay even the wage increase of 8 cents an hour the truck owners would have to pay a retroactive amount of $1,354,836 back to Jan. 1.

"This cannot be paid," said McCarron. "The present award included both wage increases and hour regulations. The situation spells ruin to a great and essential industry. The trucking operators simply cannot pay the amounts demanded."

Claim Small Profit Margin

In what is designated as the central region, in which Chicago is included, McCarron said, 359 carriers of all classes operated in 1943 at a cost of 99.1 per cent and in 1944 at a cost of 98.5 per cent, which did not allow the operators much margin of profit to pay any increases.

Crawford explained that appeals had been made for rate relief for the truckers after the 8 cent award and that if additional increases should be granted by the WLB the demand for relief would be renewed. The request was not granted, but was left for determination after a final decision on the wage award, Crawford said.

He pointed out that even if relief is granted, such increased revenue would not be retroactive as the wage payments would be, so would be of little aid to the truckers in making back wage payments.

LEADER OF VETS DENIES GI RIGHTS MENACE UNIONS

BY GEORGE HARTMANN

Statements made by Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein, who is a public member of the regional war labor board, that insistence by World War II veterans on "super-seniority" rights to their old jobs in civilian life as provided by the GI bill of rights "will wreck labor unions" yesterday aroused the ire of Robert J. Kelter, president of the United Veterans of World War II.

Weinstein, speaking before a meeting of the American Veterans' committee in Hotel Sherman, said he favored giving veterans job seniority equal to the time they spent in service, but that the veteran should take his job chances with others of the same seniority.

Old Workers Bumped, He Says

"I do not think Gen. Hershey intended that veteran seniority claims should be used as they are being used in many instances to 'bump off' old and valued workers," the rabbi said.

"A veteran of this war with six years' seniority, including his war service, who returned to his old job, bumped a World War I veteran with three children out of a job. The employer is encouraging this sort of thing and if veterans of this war insist on this super-seniority in jobs it will wreck labor unions."

Kelter, who is also chairman of the veterans' committee of local 274 of the United Automobile, Aircraft, and Agricultural Implement Workers' union [CIO], said:

"Veterans don't want to bust unions. They want only jobs. If our own union and Rabbi Weinstein continue to take the positions they are maintaining against war veterans, this will break the unions because the veterans want jobs and they're going to get them."

Kelter disclosed that the veterans' organization which he heads is ready to submit thru the Dodge Chicago CIO local union a plan which will be forwarded to the international CIO union for insertion into its union contracts with employers. The plan will provide that veterans who never have been employed be hired on a 1 to 2 basis with civilians discharged thru cutbacks.

War Service Would Count

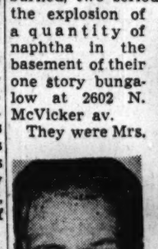
If the veteran proves after one month's work that he is capable of holding the job assigned him, his war service then would be attached as job seniority.

"Weinstein's idea for veterans will never work because under his plan the veteran would never get a job until all the civilians who had worked in the plant during the entire war had been rehired," Kelter asserted.

NAPHTHA EXPLOSION BURNS 3 IN FAMILY AND DAMAGES HOME

Three members of a family were burned, two seriously, yesterday in the explosion of a quantity of naphtha in the basement of their one story bungalow at 2602 N. McVicker av.

They were Mrs. Eleanor Frolik, 37; her husband, James, 42; and their son, Vance, 5. All were taken to the Belmont hospital. Mrs. Frolik and Vance were seriously injured. Frolik, owner of a gasoline station at 2500 S. Pulaski rd., suffered face and hand burns.



James Frolik

Vance Frolik

Cragin police said the Froliks were in the basement cleaning a suit with naphtha when the blast occurred. Mrs. Frolik, her clothing aflame, ran out first. A neighbor, Robert Troupe, 6040 Wrightwood av., beat out the flames. Frolik rescued Vance. The explosion wrecked the front of the bungalow.

CREATE MEDAL FOR YOUTHFUL WAR GARDENERS

The creation of a Gen. MacArthur medal for outstanding boy and girl gardeners as a means of meeting increasing food shortages was announced yesterday by the National Victory Garden institute. Any boy and girl may qualify for the medal by complying with requirements of his or her particular organizations, such as the Scouts, based on inspection of gardens by local leaders, Lester J. Norris, chairman of the institute board, explained.

DRAFT 7 POINT ENTRY PLAN TO HELP CRIPPLES

A seven point program to make public buildings easily accessible to all handicapped persons, both veterans and civilians, has been proposed by the architects' advisory committee of the National Society for Crippled Children, Mrs. Margaret Pope Hovey, national chairman of the society, announced yesterday.

The program recently was drawn up by C. Herrick Hammond, state architect of Illinois; Edwin Green of Harrisburg, Pa., and the late Col. John Holabird, prominent Chicago architect.

Eliminates Many Stairs

The plan would eliminate outside steps to public buildings and flights of steps by providing grade level entrances. It would provide convenient elevator service in all buildings, eliminate inside steps, do away with all excessively high curbs, and place hand rails on both sides of steps the full length of flights wherever steps can not be eliminated.

Plans for an enclosed driveway adjacent to a garage or parking area should be considered in planning apartments, schools, universities, factories, hospitals, churches, and public buildings, the committee contended. Also, heavy doors should be eliminated. Where there are revolving outside doors, auxiliary swinging doors should be provided.

Plan Is Given Backing

The committee further recommended the widest dissemination of the program to architects, city planners and public officials connected with federal and state building agencies, school boards, county boards, and city councils.

The Illinois Commission for the Handicapped and the Illinois Association for the Crippled have announced their support of the architects' advisory committee here in Illinois, Mrs. Hovey reported.

'KIDNAPED' GIRL IS FOUND WHEN DAD REMEMBERS

City and military police and the federal bureau of investigation joined in a search yesterday for Helen Sue Mistretta, 9, of 740 Wrightwood av., who had been reported kidnaped or secreted. After several hours of excitement the girl was found safe in the home of Lt. Thomas Carroll, 19, of 541 Deming pl.

Police were told that Robert Mistretta, Helen's father, had forgotten that he agreed to let her spend the night in the lieutenant's home. Lt. Carroll wanted the girl to sing for his mother.

The father belatedly remembered that another girl in the neighborhood knew the lieutenant and from her the address was obtained. Lt. Carrol and his parents said they enjoyed children and meant no harm.
